First Stavros trial slated for March 25

by LYNN ASINOF

The first trial resulting from the recent indictments against six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials is scheduled to begin March 25.

James Stavros, indicted former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, will begin his trial before U.S. District Judge Hubert Will on that date. Stavros is facing seven counts of extortion in this trial, and will be tried separately on extortion and conspiracy charges contained in two other indictments.

One of the five other men indicted Jan. 31 with Stavros pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit extortion last week. Michael Valenza, chairman of Wheeling's environmental commission and former village trustee, entered a guilty plea after the U.S. Attorney's Office agreed to drop a second charge of extortion against him.

Stavros' attorney, Joel Murray, told The Herald Friday he does not yet know what affect Valenza's plea will have on his case. "I don't really know at this time," he said Friday. "I haven't really looked into it."

VALENZA'S PLEA, however, might substantially affect the case against Wheeling Building Director William Bieber, who is charged with Stavros in two other cases. In pleading guilty, Valenza admitted to conspiring with Bieber and others to extort $1,700 of furniture from Wickes Inc.

In addition, Assistant U.S. Atty. Steven Kadison told The Herald Valenza will be a witness for the government "if necessary."

Bieber's attorney, David Schippers, said Friday that his client does not plan to change his plea in light of Valenza's action. "It may very well be that Valenza did conspire with other people, but Bill Bieber's attitude on this thing is that he never conspired with him," Schippers said. "So how can we plead?"

Schippers admitted that Valenza's plea

"is going to make it a little more difficult." He said, however, that Bieber "has said he is innocent."

SINCE BIEBER is charged with Stavros in two other conspiracy and extortion cases, Valenza's plea also may have an indirect effect on Stavros.

Attorneys representing two others named in the indictments said they did not think Valenza's admission of guilt would affect their cases.

"I read about it. It didn't strike me one way or the other," said Louis Carbonaro, representing Nicholas Phillips, a Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals employee. Phillips is charged with extorting $50,000 from Wickes Inc. He is also Stavros' cousin.

John Coghlan, the attorney representing William Hart, said "I haven't given the matter any thought one way or the other. I read it in the paper. That is the extent of my knowledge."

HART, A FORMER Wheeling trustee, is charged with conspiring with Bieber and Stavros to commit extortion against Bernard Wassmer, who purchased Duo Sign Co. from Hart in Sept. 1970. The attorney for Ira Colitz, charged with aiding Phillips in the Wickes case, was unavailable for comment. Colitz was a member of the county zoning board of appeals, but resigned after being indicted.

In setting a date for the Stavros trial, Judge Will denied several motions including one for the dismissal of charges. He also denied Murray's request to separate the seven extortion counts against Stavros into individual cases.

While Judge Will ruled that the government must provide information on any electronic surveillance and favorable evidence, he denied Murray's request for transcripts of testimony before the grand jury.

The indictments resulted from a year-long federal grand jury investigation into alleged shakedowns of Wheeling developers and businesses.

Plan to 'open' village meetings topic tonight

A series of proposals to open Wheeling Village Board meetings for citizen participation will be discussed by the board tonight.

Trustee John Koeppen has asked fellow board members to revise village policy to establish an open forum period during board meetings. He is proposing that residents be allowed to ask any questions during a half-hour period following the opening of the board meeting.

In addition, Koeppen is asking that the board adopt the policy of reading all ordinances twice before passage. He said that between the two readings, the ordinance should be placed on public inspection at least one week. This would allow residents to review the law before it is approved.

According to Koeppen's proposals, the board would also vote on zoning and planning recommendations at the time they come before the board. Currently, trustees vote to direct the attorney to prepare the recommendations in ordinance form before considering the matter.

THE BOARD committee structure would also be revised. Currently, the committees are composed of three board members, with two committees often meeting at the same time.

Koeppen is asking that the committees consist of all six board members with the village manager acting as chairman. He said this will allow the trustees to participate in all committee decisions.

Finally, Koeppen is proposing a routing sheet designed to keep track of developments as they progress from annexation to zoning and to the plan commission.

Board members will review Koeppen's suggestions, and decide whether to enact them.

The board is also scheduled to open bids for construction work on the Husky Park retention basin. The work is to include reexcavation of the basin as well as extensive landscaping.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Residents split on liquor licenses

Wheeling residents who attended recent village board accountability sessions were equally divided on whether to increase the number of village liquor licenses.

Slightly less than half of the residents said there are enough liquor licenses in the village. Nearly 80 of the 160 residents polled said they did not want more licenses issued.

Voting at the six accountability sessions was consistent. Of those favoring more liquor licenses, the majority said they would like licenses issued to private clubs and grocery stores. A lesser number favored creating a beer and wine license for serving drinks at restaurants.

Trustee Al Lang began the straw poll because he has received a large number of requests for new licenses from supermarkets and restaurants.

Currently there are 21 liquor licenses in the village including two for not-for-profit clubs. Any increase in the number of liquor licenses would have to be approved by the village board. If approved, those licenses would be issued by Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon, who serves as the village's liquor commissioner.

Lang said he would discuss the matter in an upcoming committee meeting. He noted that residents appear to be equally divided on the matter, but did not indicate whether he favored increasing the number of licenses.

Adlai: oil companies 'ripping off consumers'

by KAREN BLECHA

About 400 Chicago-area teachers greeted Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., with a standing ovation yesterday as he told them "the American people are being ripped off while the government stands by" in the fuel crisis.

"The oil companies have helped create the gas shortage," Stevenson said. "The profits rise higher and the lines grow longer. The people line up at the gas stations, they line up at the bank."

Signs carrying messages of "Dial Down Profits!" "America, the land of plenty — plenty of bull!" and "Kids need heat!" waved throughout the audience of mostly teachers at Maine East High School in Park Ridge.

Stevenson was invited to this "More Gas for Less" rally to talk about his Consumer Energy Act that calls for price rollbacks on gasoline and public reforms of the oil industry.

THE RALLY was sponsored by the Illinois Education Assn., the United Auto Workers and the Amalgamated Meatcutters. The three labor groups had invited congressmen from throughout the state, but only U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-Ill., was there. Abner Mikva, candidate for the 10th District congressional seat, also attended to answer questions. Teachers continued to interrupt

Stevenson with applause as he rapped the Nixon administration — "At times I am tempted to call the Nixon administration the Exxon administration" — for its unwillingness to fight for the consumer. He even predicted even higher gas prices for the rest of this year, saying they would probably rise 12 to 15 cents per gallon this year as they did in 1973.

"The President's program comes down to higher prices for the consumer," he said. "A policy of consumer gouging is a prescription for economic disaster. What's good for Exxon isn't always good for the country."

Stevenson urged the audience to make their support for his bill which Nixon has threatened to veto, known in Washington. He said he would personally deliver to the White House petitions with 10,000 signatures in support of oil industry reforms that had been gathered by the IEA.

STEVENSON SAID what the teachers wanted to hear: Young did not. In a question-and-answer period after the speech, Young said he would not support Stevenson's bill because it would be "counter-productive to the American free enterprise system," he said. His answer was met with boos and hisses from the audience, as were other of his answers to questions about the fuel shortage. Several times he was interrupted and the audience would not let him finish his answer.

"It's obvious you're not going to take time to listen to me," Young said. "You should get your facts straight (about the gas shortage) before making accusations."

Mikva said he would support Stevenson's bill if he is elected next November. "I am willing to slug it out with the oil industry," he said.

Teachers at the rally complained of cold classrooms and the higher cost of living because of the fuel shortage. Several said they did not know how to answer their students' questions about the gas crisis and who was to blame.

The rally was another attempt by the IEA to build nationwide support for price rollback legislation. Last month, the group demonstrated in front of the Standard Oil of Indiana building in Chicago to protest long lines at gas stations and high prices.

Schools approve anti-bias policy

by JILL BETTNER

The Dist. 21 school board has adopted a policy aimed at eliminating the use of biased educational materials in local schools in response to a request by a group of parents.

The Committee of Concerned Parents of Dist. 21, specifically concerned about sexual bias, six weeks ago appealed to the school board to enact a policy to make every effort to rid schools of materials that reflect discrimination and/or stereotyping of sex roles.

The broad policy adopted by the school board last Thursday night not only covers sexual bias, but all other forms of discrimination.

THE FOLLOWING paragraphs will be included in the Dist. 21 policy manual, a guide for school operations, as a result of the board action:

"The basic goals of all instruction in Dist. 21 schools shall be to provide equal opportunities for all students regardless of sex, race, creed, color, religion, ancestry or national origin and to fully develop each individual's capabilities and therefore encourage voluntary use of learned skills.

"The superintendent or his designee shall develop a curriculum which focuses on the implementation of stated district goals. He shall provide for systematic and continuous review of the programs of the district so as to eliminate any discrimination on account of sex, race,

Want peace, quiet? ...It'll cost you

Students at Dist. 21's Jack London Junior High School in Wheeling are looking for sponsors interested in paying to keep them quiet.

The students are planning a Day of Listening, March 21, as an unusual fundraising project for Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau in Wheeling.

Sponsors are being asked to pay for each minute of silence to be maintained by the students with the proceeds to go to the local counseling agency.

The students will be competing for donations. Pupils collecting the most money by the end of the day will receive prizes.

creed, color, religion, ancestry or national origin."

Members of the parent committee, present at the meeting, asked what procedures would be used to evaluate programs and requested that citizens be involved in the review. Supt. Kenneth Gill said the procedures have not yet been outlined and added that citizen participation is encouraged in all school affairs.

"I know there's still suspicion that exists as to what will take place on this," Gill told the committee. "But we really feel the issues you brought to us were valid and you know we've followed up on them — maybe not as quickly as you would have liked — but these are definitely pertinent issues that have raised interest not only here, but among principals, teachers and staff as well."

PARENT COMMITTEE members apparently are satisfied with the new policy.

"I say let's start implementing it," said Judy Keller, 1210 E. Burr Oak Dr., Arlington Heights. Mrs. Keller has served as one of the main spokesmen for the parent group.

Questioned as to whether the policy fulfills the purpose of the parents' original request, Mrs. Keller said, "I haven't fully digested it yet. But it's most certainly a step in the right direction."

"I don't understand how the procedures will work, but I want to make sure citizens are included," said Diane Nicholson, 574 Bernard Dr., Buffalo Grove.

Devil film dispute ends: movie is out

After a last-minute flourish of charges and controversy, "The Devil in Miss Jones" left Elk Grove Village last week-end. The dispute between village officials and Elk Grove Cinema owner Walter Panceo came to a head late Thursday when the theater manager and projectionist were arrested and the X-rated movie was seized under a court order. After a hearing Saturday before Assoc. Circuit Court Judge Francis W. Glowacki, village officials agreed to drop charges against Panceo if he and his employees in turn would stop showing the controversial movie and drop a $250,000 damage suit filed against the village in federal court.

Hoffman to rename Pinger Park

Lakeview Park in Hoffman Estates was renamed in 1967 in honor of the village's first mayor, Edward Pinger. The change was an attempt to smooth out differences between the park district and village government. But the community is no longer proud of its first mayor, who was one of six former officials convicted recently on federal bribery charges in connection with a zoning payoff. So Pinger Park is out and the park district is looking for the name of a suitable tree to replace it.

Seniors confirm housing needs

A survey of senior citizens in Mount Prospect indicates that two-thirds of the village's elderly residents would move into senior citizen housing if it were available locally. Of those who said they wanted housing, 52 per cent listed incomes of less than $5,000. Kathleen Stoga, coordinator of the village's senior citizen service office, said the survey results mean "there's no question" housing for the elderly is needed.

Official backs bus safety drive

Richard J. Martwick, Cook County schools superintendent, is backing a drive by a group of Schaumburg Township residents for stronger school bus safety legislation. He and Eugene Weir, county director of pupil transportation, met last week with members of a Hanover Park citizens committee formed after the Dec. 20 death of kindergartner Robyn Bradshaw, who was injured by a school bus. "In all 90 Cook County districts where school transportation is used," Weir told the group, "we have found there is poor communication between the students and the bus driver. The driver doesn't pay any attention to the children and the children don't care about the driver." Martwick encouraged the group to testify March 12 at a meeting of the Illinois School Problems Commission.

Driver test site search goes on

The long-delayed driver testing station for the Northwest suburbs is little closer to reality than it was four years ago. Several sites for the station have been picked and then abandoned, the last two because of soil problems and lack of utilities. A spokesman for Illinois Sec. of State Michael Howlett last week indicated there has been little progress and said there is no target date for obtaining a site.

Stu Paddock suffers heart attack

Stuart R. Paddock Jr., president of The Paddock Corp., was admitted to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, Friday after suffering a mild heart attack.

Robert Y. Paddock, executive vice president, said his brother was resting comfortably and expected to remain in the hospital for a few days followed by a short period of recuperation at home. No telephone calls, flowers or visitors are permitted at the present time.

The Paddock Corp. is parent company of Paddock Publications, publishers of The Herald.

State legislators win awards from conservationists

Four state representatives from the Northwest suburbs were named Saturday as recipients of the Golden Award of the Illinois League of Conservation Voters.

Also named by the league, as one of its "Dirty Dozen" was Sen. John A. Graham, R-Barrington.

The Golden Award winners were Rep. Eugene S. Chapman, D-Arlington Heights; Rep. Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie; Rep. Richard A. Mugalian, D-Palatine; and Rep. John E. Porter, R-Evanston.

Four other representatives from the five legislative districts encompassing the Northwest suburbs received "good" ratings from the league, as did Sen. Bradley M. Glass, R-Wilmette.

THE LEAGUE RATED representatives on 15 votes on environmental issues, and senators on 13.

Among the highest ratings given by the league was that to Mugalian, who had a 97 per cent score on positions favored by the conservationists. He was absent for the vote on one issue.

Porter was given a 93 per cent rating, and Mrs. Chapman and Jaffe each rated 90 per cent on the league's chart.

The league rated legislators in categories of "excellent," "good," "fair," "poor," and "bad." Graham was the only one of the 20 Northwest suburban legislators to receive a bad rating. The league gave Graham a rating of 38 per cent, lowest in the Senate with the exception of the 23 per cent given to Sen. John Knuppel, D-Petersburg.

RATED GOOD by the league were

State Sen. John A. Graham

Rep. Harold A. Katz, D-Glenview, with 87 per cent; Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, 77 per cent; Rep. Eugene F. Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, 82 per cent; and Rep. Jack B. Williams, D-Franklin Park, 80 per cent; and Sen. Glass, 83 per cent.

Given "poor" ratings were Rep. John Friedland, R-South Elgin, with 40 per cent; Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge, 47 per cent; and Sen. John Nimrod, R-Skokie, 52 per cent.

Rated "fair" were Rep. Edward Bluthardt, R-Schiller Park, 57 per cent; Rep. Brian Duff, R-Northfield, 60 per cent; Rep. Leo LaFleur, R-Bloomington, 53 per cent; Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, 50 per cent; and Rep. Richard Walsh, R-Oak Park, 60 per cent; and Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, 58 per cent.

Area boy, 11, listed 'poor'; said to have Reye's Syndrome

An 11-year-old Hoffman Estates boy is the latest Northwest suburban victim of Reye's Syndrome, a rare childhood disease that has killed two Northwest suburban youths and hospitalized three others.

Thomas Kramer, 262 Bedford Rd., was reported in "poor" condition yesterday at Children's Memorial Hospital in Chicago. He was transferred there from Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights last Thursday.

Hospital spokesmen also reported that Thomas Haas, 7, of Palatine and an 11-year-old Des Plaines boy whose name hospital officials will not release are in good condition. Dale Chany, 14, of Arlington Heights, Donald Rohrich, 13, of Elk Grove Village and seven other Chicago area children have died from the same disease.

The disease is not contagious and usually follows a virus like influenza-B or chicken pox. Symptoms include persistent vomiting, severe stomach pains, delirium, convulsions and eventually coma.

Kramer, a sixth grader, had been absent from Winston Churchill School in Schaumburg since Feb. 25, according to Dist. 54 Supt. Wayne Schaible. Schaible said absenteeism at the school has decreased "considerably" since the middle of last month.

Turkish jet crash kills 345 persons

PARIS (UPI) — A wide-bodied Turkish Airlines DC10 jetliner crashed and exploded in an oak forest picnic grounds 25 miles from Paris yesterday, killing all 345 persons aboard in history's worst air disaster. The crash killed nearly twice as many persons as the two worst previous air disasters, in each of which 176 died. The plane smashed into woods near Ermenonville forest minutes after takeoff from London with 334 passengers and a crew of 11. Among the victims were 126 persons — mostly Britons — who boarded the Turkish jet at the last minute in Paris because they were stranded by a British Airlines mechanics strike in London. Among the dead were members of a British police team, which Saturday defeated their French counterparts in an annual two-nation tournament. About 40 Japanese were also among the passengers.

Airline sources in Istanbul, Turkey said they had information that five of the passengers were Arab guerrillas who may have been carrying bombs that exploded in flight.

The weather was sunny, cool and almost windless when the big plane climbed toward cruising altitude over Paris. Witnesses said it then banked sharply, began losing altitude rapidly, and nosedived to the ground in a grotesque cartwheel.

Officials said the pilot gave no indication of impending calamity, and his last radio report said all was well. The plane plowed a path hundreds of yards long through oak trees.

Golda Meir moves toward quitting

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Prime Minister Golda Meir walked out of a meeting of her Labor party Sunday and said she was giving up her efforts to form a new government, a surprise move that could mean her resignation.

The 75-year-old Prime Minister, who has been involved in dispute with outgoing defense minister Moshe Dayan and others, said she would ask President Ephraim Katzir to find someone else as her replacement.

A government official said the announcement will not for the moment mean any change in Israel's bargaining team or approach at troop disengagement talks with Syria set for later this month in Washington, since some form of caretaker government would be in power.

Members of the stunned Labor party said Mrs. Meir told them continued party factionalism, personality disputes and her resistance to growing calls for a widely-based government coalition led to her decision to step down.

At the heart of the matter were demands, led by Dayan and others, for inclusion of the Likud group in a government of national unity and her refusal on grounds the hawkish rightwing group would paralyze peace negotiations with the Arabs. The Likud has said it will return no territory.

Labor party secretary general Aharon Yadin and other members of a delegation which saw Mrs. Meir at her Jerusalem residence said she refused to consider their pleas not to return her mandate to form the government.

A source in her office said she had made her intentions known to Katzir in a

Walker announces tax relief plan

From Herald news services

Gov. Daniel Walker Sunday announced a "modest" $26 million tax relief program which includes elimination of the sales tax on drugs and medicine and property tax relief to those 60 and older.

Walker said the proposal, to be included in his budget message to the General Assembly Wednesday, would eliminate the 5 per cent sales tax on prescription and nonprescription drugs and medicine, including every-day items like vitamins and aspirin.

The second feature of the proposal would extend "circuit breaker" property tax relief now granted to persons 65 years old or older to include persons beginning at age 60.

Walker described it as a "modest program," but said, "we have a very uncertain economic future with the shortages, and I just felt it prudent not to go too far at this time."

Walker said elimination of the sales tax on drugs would save taxpayers about $20 million and the property tax relief extension can be absorbed by the state without a cutback in services or increases in other taxes.

"Our senior citizens, who rely so much on medicines, will be the obvious beneficiaries of both programs," Walker said. "And considering their limited retirement income, modest tax relief on two necessities — medicine and housing — are vital."

Walker said he felt "government has a moral obligation" to do something about the sales taxes on drugs and medicine. "That's a tax on life and good health," he said.

Walker's tax relief program will compete in the General Assembly with two more ambitious measures proposed by Republican House Speaker W. Robert Blaine, R-Park Forest, and House Minority Leader Clyde Choate, D-Anna.

Amoco chief denies oil monopoly

From Herald news services

The board chairman of Amoco said Sunday the gasoline shortage will last another 6 to 12 months and denied charges, made to his face by an angry senator, that the big oil companies are a monopoly "law unto themselves."

John Swearingen, board chairman of Standard Oil of Indiana (Amoco), and Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., disagreed heatedly on the role of the oil companies in the energy crisis and their argument developed repeatedly into a shouting match.

Both men appeared on ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers."

Swearingen denied charges made recently by the Shah of Iran and repeated by Ribicoff that U.S. oil companies were smuggling record oil supplies through a leaky Arab embargo. Ribicoff said "the world is awash with oil."

"This is not true," Swearingen said. "We are still deficient as far as our ability to run the refineries at capacity and the ability to distribute the product. We can kill this shortage problem in the long run, but in the short run — and by this I mean the next six to 12 months — we are going to be deficient in supplies as far as the public is concerned."

As part of his lengthy charges of big oil company collusion to control the U.S. market and profit from shortages, Ribicoff alleged oil companies "hide the facts" the government needs to determine just how much oil is available. "These figures just are not available — the oil companies are a law unto themselves," he said.

With Swearingen interjecting such comments as "you're wrong" and "he has no proof," Ribicoff accused the major U.S. oil companies of sending oil to foreign rather than American refineries and of "squeezing out independent and franchise dealers so they (the majors) will have a monopoly on distribution."

In other energy developments:

• Reps. Ronald A. Sarasin, R-Conn., and Stanford E. Parris, R-Va., have proposed legislation that would cut by half the federal gasoline tax of four cents a gallon to help offset effects of rising gas prices.

• The Mobil Oil Corp. announced it had cut wholesale gasoline prices 2.2 cents per gallon and heating oil prices by 4.2 cents per gallon but did not say if or when the wholesale cuts would be passed along to retail consumers.

• Russell E. Train, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, said he doubts the nation can achieve energy self-sufficiency by President Nixon's target date of 1980.

• Egypt has formally asked for a meeting of Arab oil ministers in Tripoli, Libya, next Sunday. Earlier Arab press reports said the oil embargo against the United States would top the agenda. This would be the fourth review of the Arab oil weapon, first applied against the U.S. on Oct. 17 for siding with Israel during the October war.

Arab hijackers captured after burning jetliner

AMSTERDAM (UPI) — Arab guerrillas hijacked a British Airways jetliner with 102 persons aboard soon after takeoff from Beirut Sunday, forced it to land at Schiphol Airport outside Amsterdam and then set it afire after allowing all passengers and crew members to flee.

Police captured the hijackers, who were armed with guns and hand grenades, in a runway chase in which no shots were fired.

The passengers and crew members slid down the emergency chutes of the blue, silver and white VC10 aircraft moments before smoke and flames began pouring out. Police said two persons injured their ankles hitting the ground.

A British Airways spokesman said there were 92 passengers and 10 crew members aboard the four-engined jetliner on the regular-scheduled flight to London.

There were conflicting reports on the number of hijackers. The passengers said two, but the police said they had captured four after chasing them across the runway.

The gunmen took over the jetliner shortly after it left Beirut, the plane's only stopover on a flight from Bombay to London. The airline spokesman said the hijackers at first ordered the pilot to fly over Greece and then on to Amsterdam.

Officials at Schiphol at first refused landing permission but changed their minds after the pilot informed the control tower that he had fuel for only 15 minutes more.

There were reports the hijackers wanted to blow up the aircraft over the North Sea, but the fuel shortage prevented them from getting there. One Jordanian passenger said a hijacker told him in Arabic they were doing this to punish the British for sending British mercenaries to the war in Israel.

Watergate prosecutors ready more indictments

From Herald news services

Watergate prosecutors Sunday were reported readying more major indictments, while Chief U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica weighed what to do with a secret grand jury report about President Nixon's role in the scandal.

Sources familiar with the investigation said Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski would follow last Friday's indictments in the Watergate cover-up with new charges touching on activities of the secret White House "plumbers" unit.

The indictments were expected to be returned by the second of three Watergate grand juries about midweek and to focus primarily on the 1971 break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

The indictments returned Friday charged there was a master conspiracy to cover up not only the bugging of Democratic party headquarters, but also "other illegal and improper activities." The indictment charged the plot was conceived by the seven defendants — four of whom were Nixon's closest advisers — along with other persons "known and unknown" and is still continuing.

While it was not known precisely what is in the secret "report and recommendation" the grand jury handed to Sirica last Friday, UPI has learned it contains information about Nixon's role in the cover-up.

Assistant Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd said Sunday there seemed to be "good reason to presume" the secret report deals with Nixon. Further, he said, the recent indictments "pose serious implications" for Nixon and seem to bring the cover-up into the Oval Office for the first time.

Doctors badger federal official on health price controls

by STEVE BROWN

They complained about the lid on rate increases. They badgered a federal official as to why they are one of the few segments of the economy still under price controls.

The scene was reminiscent of last month's demands raised by independent truckers, but instead of the scenario taking place at a truck stop, the grousers were gathered in the ballroom at the North Shore Hilton in Skokie.

About 50 doctors and hospital officials were there to listen to and question John Twinn, one of the government's chief architects for the price control on the health care industry.

TWINN, WHOSE breakfast meeting with the doctors was organized by U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10th, took a tough stand against the demands of medical men who clamored for a complete removal of controls on how much they could raise their rates.

The administrator of the health section of the U.S. Cost of Living Council, charged the health care industry was one of the most inflationary components of the economy before wage and price controls were instituted in 1971. He noted health care represents a $100 billion industry annually.

"Doctors fees were rising at least 50 per cent faster than the rest of the economy then," he said. He explained that the controls which now limit fee hikes to amount to 4 per cent annually appeared to be one of the few segments of the price stabilization issue which appeared to be working.

"I believe the medical profession should be commended for their efforts to help bring down the cost of living," Twinn said.

HOWEVER, THE kudos from Twinn were short lived as the doctors asked why the government had kept controls on them, while dropping controls on other segments of the economy.

They argued that the government should allow the controls to float free.

It was noted that not only have costs risen more than 4 per cent annually, but the actual treatment performed by doctors has become more comprehensive and more sophisticated in recent years.

Hospital officials also noted they were in a bind because they were unable to pass along increased cost from suppliers because of the price controls.

"We have to get the government out of the business of financing medical care," said Dr. George Lagorio. He noted that much of the inflationary problems were created as a direct result of the Medicare program.

"It used to be that we could not get a person over 65 into a hospital, now we cannot get them out," he added.

HOWEVER, TWINN indicated a, fear of what would happen to doctors fees and hospital rates if controls were removed.

"The restraints we have seen would turn into a gold rush," he said, adding that the fees and rates would jump dramatically as doctors attempted to boost rates to the highest possible level anticipating tighter controls imposed by a national health insurance plan.

Twinn said he believed some type of flexible controls are needed for the period between the time price controls are ended, which could be as soon as the end of April, and the start of a national health insurance plan.

"The public has a Jeckell and Hyde view of the medical field, they want the best health care at all costs, until they get the bill, then they call for the clamps," he said.

BOTH TWINN and Young warned the medicine men they are vulnerable targets to some public officials.

"Many people believe that doctors and lawyers are overpaid," Young said. A spokesman for the American Medical Assn. said that "doctors are usually at the top of the income scale for all professional fields." He added that doctors earn an average of about $40,000 annually.

Despite the high incomes, doctors and hospital officials said continued controls could lead to strikes and the unionization of hospital employees.

RALPH HUTCHINS, administrator of the Skokie Valley Hospital, noted, "how can we be controlled and our suppliers not be controlled?" He also said that some hospitals have put off the purchase of new equipment because of the inability to pass along the costs because of controls.

"It could very well be possible that what you are seeing from the independent truckers this year could be repeated by doctors in three or four years," one doctor warned.

Driver test site search still on; Barrington Hills?

by JULIA BAUER

Four years ago, Northwest suburban drivers thought they were about to get their own driver testing station and would no longer have to go 15 to 30 miles to state testing facilities.

Today, the Northwest suburban driver testing station is little closer to reality than it was in 1970.

The biggest single stumbling block to building the station has been a three-year search for a 40-acre site that suits state officials in both cost and location.

THE LATEST SITE to catch the state's eye is land in Barrington Hills, near Ill. Rts. 59 and 72. Earlier sites considered and abandoned over the years were in Arlington Heights and unincorporated Palatine Township.

But now, the search for other locations is on again, at least on a small scale, according to Illinois Secretary of State spokesman, Norbert Johnson.

"The fact of the matter is we're looking for other sites with less impediments," Johnson said. He's been heading the investigation of the Barrington Hills site for nearly a year, and said yesterday that the search for an alternative location has not been successful.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, when contacted by The Herald Friday, said he would call Howlett today to check on the state's progress or possible lack of it. Schlickman was instrumental in getting legislation to fund the station two years ago.

PROBLEMS WITH THE Barrington Hills location were predicted last year by members of a three-man search committee appointed under former Secretary of State John Lewis, a Republican.

Search committee members submitted a list of recommended locations to newly-elected Democratic Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett in January, 1973, but the Barrington Hills location was not one of the sites on their list.

Why? Committee members said the site was not served by sewer or water lines from the Metropolitan Sanitary District and it did not meet the committee's accessibility requirement for the bulk of the traffic which would come from the southeast. In fact, the one big thing the site did have in its favor was a low purchase price, reported at $12,000 per acre.

The committee's top recommendations cost an average of $50,000 per acre, although those sites were already improved. Last summer, Johnson predicted that the state could extend improvements to the Barrington Hills location and still spend less than it would cost for the higher-priced sites.

STATE LEGISLATORS set aside $5.3 million two years ago to buy land and build the station, when it appeared that the testing station would go on a 40-acre site west of Palatine, on Quentin Road between Northwest Highway and Dundee Road.

Poor soil conditions and pressure from local currency exchanges caused the site to be dropped, according to state officials. That location is currently scheduled for a condominium apartment project.

The final purchase and construction of the Northwest suburban site is apparently not imminent. Johnson said he had no specific target date for finalizing the purchase.

In the meantime, Northwest suburban residents must still go to Libertyville or Elgin for their driving tests.

When it is built, the Northwest suburban station will have facilities for written and on-the-road testing of drivers.

Commuter protests rush-hour 'squeeze play' at station by pair of trains

by KURT BAER

Hundreds of railroad commuters were caught in an uncomfortable squeeze play recently when two northwest-bound trains pulled into the Arlington Heights station at the same time.

The scheduling mixup caused no death or injury. But it was enough to unnervise at least one passenger, Jim Schrader of Buffalo Grove, who reported the incident to officials at the Chicago and North Western Ry. and asked for an investigation.

Schrader was a passenger on C&N's No. 639 scheduled to arrive in Arlington Heights at 5:56 p.m. Last Thursday, as he and some 1,000 other commuters were getting off the train a second C&N train pulled into the station, slowly slicing through the crowd of disembarking passengers and trapping some between the two sets of tracks.

"There was one little girl on the track who was grabbed away by a man who looked like he might have been attacking her, when actually he was probably saving her life," Schrader says.

R. A. DRENGLER, assistant division manager for the railroad and the man who investigated the incident, says the second train, followed to the letter the railroad's procedure in the case.

"The train made a complete stop before it reached the station and then proceeded at less than 5 m.p.h. We found nothing unsafe or irregular about it at all," Drengler said.

The second train, which was sounding its horn and pulled in, may have been late or the first train may have been early. Drengler could not be sure.

BUT ACCORDING to the railroad's timetable the twin arrival should not have occurred. The next train after the 639 is the 641 and it is not scheduled to arrive until 6:13. The train before the 639 is supposed to be in Arlington Heights at 5:49 p.m.

Drengler says it is not an uncommon occurrence among the railroad's 200 daily trains and 60 suburban stations for one train to arrive before another has left.

"Our rules require that the train proceed through the station area with extreme caution, and that is what the engineer did in this instance," he said.

COMMUTERS sometimes have to scurry across the tracks when two Chicago and North Western Ry. trains arrive at almost the same time.

Schools finally adopt drug abuse policy

After two years, the Dist. 21 school board has adopted a policy regarding student drug abuse in local schools.

The board last attempted to draft a drug abuse policy in May, 1972. Because board members at the time could not agree on procedures to be used to implement the policy, discussion was dropped.

"We let it die then because we couldn't reach agreement," Supt. Kenneth Gill said Friday.

The issue came up again only recently because the school board is in the process of updating its policy manual and is required to have some kind of statement on student drug abuse. The new policy enacted last Thursday night by the school board reads:

"Students may not sell, purchase, possess or use behavior affecting drugs (including but not exclusively marijuana, narcotics and hallucinogens) while on Dist. 21 property or while under the supervision of Dist. 21 personnel without filing written authorization for such possession or use, signed by a licensed physician, with the principal of the school or other Dist. 21 supervisor acting in the place of the principal."

Procedures for carrying out the new policy will be worked out "in the very near future," according to Gill. The superintendent predicted further debate between board members over such issues as how drug overdose cases will be handled and who will be contacted when student is caught with illegal drugs.

Much of the disagreement two years ago was over whether parents or police should be notified first when a student is found with illegal drugs in his possession.

Work to resume soon on park projects

by JOE FRANZ

Work on a number of park projects started in Buffalo Grove last year will be resumed as soon as weather permits and should be finished by the end of summer, Park Director Stan Crosland said Friday.

Most of the projects were originally scheduled to be completed last fall, but some unpredicted construction delays prevented the work from being finished. Crosland said progress this spring and summer again will largely depend on the weather.

A Herald survey of park construction shows work is scheduled to resume at Emmerich Park and parks at Cooper Junior High School, Longfellow and Kilmer schools. In addition the park district is planning to begin work on the site adjacent to the Washington Irving School.

CONSTRUCTION at each park will vary somewhat, but most of the work consists of preparing baseball diamonds, finishing work on tennis courts and installing playground apparatus.

Crosland said work on the two baseball diamonds at Emmerich Park will begin as soon as the weather breaks and hopefully will be finished in time for the start of the Buffalo Grove Boys' Baseball Program this spring.

The same goes for the two diamonds at Cooper Junior High school.

The work at both parks consists of renovating the fields and installing new backstops. One of the diamonds at Emmerich will be lighted to permit night softball.

The completion of work at the two parks will give Buffalo Grove eight usable baseball diamonds. In addition to the four at Cooper and Emmerich, there are two fields at Kilmer School on Bernard Drive and one at Longfellow School on Arlington Heights Road.

LAKE COUNTY residents still will lack a baseball field and may have to wait another year before any sites are developed.

Although nothing is planned this year, park officials said the five-acre site adjacent to Twin Groves School on Penny Lane eventually will have baseball diamonds, tennis courts and playground equipment. The site was donated to the village by Levitt and Sons Inc. and is expected to be transferred to the park district in the near future.

The park district last fall negotiated an agreement with the village to purchase eight acres near Willow Stream Park on Farrington Drive, and officials said that area eventually will have some baseball diamonds. Construction of the diamonds, however, will not start this year.

By early summer the tennis courts at Emmerich Park are scheduled to be finished. The work consists of paving, coloring and lighting the courts. Lights already have been installed at the Kilmer tennis courts and will be hooked up this spring.

WHEN WORK is finished at Emmerich, the village will have six tennis courts. In addition to the two at Emmerich and the two at Kilmer, there are also two at Willow Stream Park.

This spring construction will continue on the free form timber and wood playground and climbing apparatus at Longfellow School. The park is the first of its kind in School Dist. 21. Work was started last fall, but was halted by winter weather. It is scheduled to be completed this spring.

Still more work is planned this spring at the Washington Irving Park site on Arlington Heights Road. The park district plans to have the drainage ditch which cuts across the middle of the 5.5-acre site moved to the south end of the property. Moving the ditch will make the site more suitable for recreation.

EVEN WITH the construction, Crosland said the site will not be usable much of the time due to poor drainage and flooding. On the south side of the school, another site will be graded and may eventually be suitable for a baseball diamond, he added.

The park district still is involved in a condemnation suit in which it is attempting to obtain an additional three acres in the Cambridge subdivision. The matter is in the courts and has not yet been resolved. The district has three acres adjacent to the land which is being condemned, but there is no access to it without the additional piece.

Village and park officials are still holding meetings with Miller Builders in an attempt to obtain additional park land in the Mill Creek subdivision. The park district has asked for five acres.

Church collecting food for needy

Canned goods are being collected by the Prospect Christian Church, 302 E. Euclid Ave., Prospect Heights, for distribution to needy families. Donations of food may be left in the church foyer or coat room.

Fall semester set to start Aug. 29

School Dist. 21 students will return to classes next fall on Thursday, Aug. 29.

The school board last Thursday night adopted the official calendar for the 1974-75 school year.

Christmas vacation will begin with the close of school Dec. 20 with students to return Jan. 6. Spring vacation is scheduled for March 28 through April 7.

The last day of classes next year will be June 13.

Parks prepare to move Levitt office to Raupp Memorial

Buffalo Grove Park District officials said they will begin preparing plans for moving the Levitt Inc. sales office to the Raupp Memorial site and hope it can be done by June 1.

Levitt and Sons Inc., a developer, has agreed to donate its sales office to the village after its model homes on Strathmore Court are sold. The park district wants to use the office for a museum on the Raupp site in Lake County.

The Raupp Memorial Museum would be operated by the park district and Buffalo Grove historical society.

THE VILLAGE board last week met with the park district and agreed to give the building to the park district after the donation is made by Levitt.

The park board Thursday night passed a motion directing its architect, Roland Schapanski, to finalize plans for transporting and erecting the building on the Raupp site. The building is currently near Strathmore Court and Arlington Heights Road and has to be moved about a mile to Denham Lane in the Strathmore subdivision.

The park board in the motion said it would like to have the move completed by June so renovation can be done during the summer.

The Buffalo Grove Historical Society hopes to open the museum to the public by the end of the year. The society is seeking members and donations of articles that are of historical significance to Buffalo Grove.

Schapanski estimates it will cost between $23,000 and $28,000 to relocate the sales office on the Raupp site. The estimate includes $10,000 to $15,000 for moving, $8,000 for a foundation, $3,000 to connect utilities and $2,000 for improvements.

THE MOVING costs may seem high, but Schapanski said a building comparable to Levitt's would cost between $60,000 and $85,000 if it were to be newly constructed.

The building is one-story and covers about 23,000 square feet. The five-acre site is part of the Raupp Farm, one of the village's oldest landmarks. It was donated to the village under the condition it would be made into a memorial.

Park Director Stan Crosland said the park district is interested in putting an addition on the sales office after it is moved to the Raupp site. The room could be used for park activities and community meetings, he said.

How to make sure aspirin dissolves

I am writing this letter for several of us arthritics who are taking enteric coated aspirin because the regular form causes stomach upsets.

Two doctors contend that the tablets do not dissolve and often lodge intact in the colon. Therefore, they are ineffective.

I put a tablet in fruit juice, and the coating dissolved. Is there any combination of food or drink that would assure us that the tablet will dissolve in our intestinal tract?

We read and discuss your column over the phone every day.

Some enteric coated pills do not dissolve adequately. It depends entirely on the coating. This applies to all enteric coated pills, not just aspirin.

Your experiment was a good one. The stomach juices are more acid than fruit juices, and I would guess more effective in dissolving the coating.

Perhaps more important is whether you are getting relief of your arthritis pains from the enteric aspirin you are using. If you are, then you should have reason to think the medicine is helping and being absorbed.

Another solution to your basic problem is to take your aspirin just after eating. Or at least drink a glass of milk with it. This will help keep ordinary aspirin from irritating your stomach. The food in the stomach helps to keep the aspirin crystals from settling on the lining of the stomach causing small aspirin burns.

I would like to ask you some questions concerning the prostate gland. Is a case of inflammation of the prostate gland curable by drugs and soaking in hot water, or is surgery the only real cure for this burning sensation?

Is it possible to again use pepper, drink coffee, tea and alcohol?

Does a man remain sexually capable after prostate gland trouble is cured?

In many instances of an infection of the prostate gland medical treatment is quite satisfactory. Young men often have an acute inflammation of the prostate, and the problem clears with medical treatment in a short time. In other cases the inflammation may be chronic and repeated treatment is used, including medicines, hot baths and massage.

In some cases chronic infection is helped by surgery. Commonly prostate surgery is for problems of obstruction, whether or not there is an inflammation. The surgery is intended to remove the center of the prostate gland to open the passageway into the bladder. In some procedures the gland is completely shelled out.

Most younger men regain their sexual ability after surgery. Occasionally an older man has reached the end of his sexual capacity, and after surgery he doesn't resume this activity, not because of the surgery but because that problem would have occurred anyway.

A lot of men do return to relatively normal diet habits and beverage habits once they have completely recovered from surgery, or from prostate trouble.

To speak on shortages

An examination of what he calls "government created shortages" will be the subject of a speech today in Elk Grove Village by noted author and lecturer Alan Stang.

The program is sponsored by the northwest area chapters of the John Birch Society and will be held at 8 p.m. at the VFW Hall, 400 E. Devon Ave. Tickets are $2 at the door.

Herald editorial

It's not time for tax relief

Illinois taxpayers would welcome a break in taxes.

And the leaders of the Illinois legislature, in this election year, seem determined to make "tax relief" the prime topic when legislators gather for their spring session in April.

You'll pardon us, we hope, if we don't applaud.

Already, Republican House

Speaker W. Robert Blair has unveiled his tax program, as has Democratic House Minority Leader Clyde Choate.

Blair wants to eliminate utility taxes on residences, claiming that the normal growth of Illinois industry, which would continue to pay the taxes, would make up the deficit. How he squares that with dire predictions of an impending (or is it already here?) recession and a continuing energy shortage, he has not made clear.

Choate wants to change the state constitution, permitting a higher income tax on corporations, to allow raising the personal income tax exemptions for individuals from $1,000 to $1,500. He overlooks the burden this would create for Illinois industry in what could be a long period of economic disruption. He also has not been anxious to point out that no amendment to the state constitution could now possibly be put before the voters before 1976.

Gov. Daniel Walker has promised to reveal his tax relief program in his budget message to the legislature Wednesday.

Whatever the governor may propose, it is reasonably certain that it will be in opposition to the Blair and Choate plans.

And after their performance in the first half of this legislative biennium, their efforts to construct a tax relief plan again promises all the drama of the Three Stooges wallpapering a room, with Larry, Curly and Moe slapping each other in the face with wet brushes and clomping around with their feet in a bucket while the wallpaper gets trampled underfoot.

Whatever program they might be able to hammer out promises to be one of political expediency.

Each of the tax relief proposals, moreover, is being made in the face of the pessimistic forecasts by Ill. Comptroller George Lindberg, who is warning of dwindling state resources and a gloomy outlook for state revenues.

The Illinois Chamber of Commerce has warned that reductions in state taxes now might well lead only to an even greater burden on the taxpayer later, if the economy does not make a dramatic reversal.

Illinois taxpayers would welcome a break in taxes. But they would be better served if the state's leaders would work out a future program to which they could agree when the economic storm has receded, rather than each promoting his own scheme and blaming others for its failures to carry favor with the voters.

Urges ERA endorsement

Fence post letters to the editor

The Illinois Legislature is preparing to go back into session. It is essential that it ratify the Equal Rights Amendment this year. As an important leader among the states, Illinois should join the majority of states (33 to date) which have already ratified ERA and be an example to the other states which have yet to decide. A total of 38 states is required to make the ERA a part of the Constitution.

The National Council of Jewish Women, with over 100,000 members nationally and over 4,000 in Illinois, strongly urges the passage of ERA this year. NCJW, in its national resolutions, resolves "to work for and support measures which ensure equal opportunity and legal equal rights for women." While NCJW used to favor protective legislation to prevent the exploitation of women, it now believes that such laws are a means of discrimination against women restricting them from holding certain jobs that offer high pay or advancement. It is time to end the legal means of such discrimination by adopting ERA.

I believe that many more citizens would strongly urge ratification of ERA if they understood just what it would really mean to them. The list of inequalities that would be eliminated is too long for this letter, but I would like to point out a few of the ways in which ERA would benefit every individual, male and female.

1. It would apply only to governmental, not to purely private action. It would not affect private employment. Some positions affected are teachers, professors and other employees of public schools. It would require equal pay for equal work.

2. It would equalize the sexes, extending benefits and protections and remove restrictions and discriminations based on sex, such as age requirements for marriage, for juvenile court jurisdiction and age limits for the right to parental support for boys and girls.

3. Social Security benefits would apply to men at age 62 based on the same formula as for a woman retiring at age 62. Also, a widower, with minor children, of a woman worker would receive the same social security benefits as the widow of a man worker with minor children.

4. Standards of admission to public in-Development blasted

I would like to mention the fact that the town and apartment houses are estimated to bring another 650 boys and girls to the school around the Rob Roy Golf Course and Driving Range in Mount Prospect. What I've seen of the schools around, they are already full or overcrowded.

Another factor against the project is that I don't think there is enough fire-fighting equipment in the area to adequately protect the subdivisions already here and four to six-story apartment houses and townhouses that are being debated on.

The Mount Prospect Park District would go to pot because of too many people using one thing at one time and leaving a big mess behind them. Mount Prospect itself would turn into a city with all of the associated problems.

What will happen to the shopping centers like Randhurst, that already have big problems with vandalism, shoplifting and crimes of assault and battery in areas hidden from view, and kids goofing around with merchandise.

The flooding which is bad now will probably get worse because of the soil they take out and the amount of ground that will be covered with asphalt and concrete which prevents drainage.

Traffic will pose another problem as such as Euclid and Wolf would have to be widened and that is not very good since there are schools on both roads and that much traffic would make it almost impossible for some kids to walk to and from school.

These are just some of the reasons why I'm against turning the Rob Roy Golf Course into town and apartment houses.

stitutions would no longer be higher for women than for men.

5. Prison terms for women could no longer be more severe than for a man who had committed the same offense, or vice versa. Laws relating to rape would not be affected.

6. Only the legal rights of men and women would be affected, not the social relationship between the sexes.

7. "Equality under the law" does not mean the sexes are regarded as identical. The right to privacy still exists under the Constitution and ERA would not abolish the practice of providing separate restrooms and sleeping quarters in public institutions: schools, prisons, the military, etc.

8. Support obligations for children would depend on the spouse's earning power, resources, and nonmonetary contributions to the family welfare. ERA would not injure the welfare of children in broken homes.

ERA recognizes the fundamental dignity and individuality of each human being. ERA is essential to guarantee the same rights and privileges under the law to every person in the United States, regardless of his sex and regardless of the state in which he lives. In this day of mobility, this consideration is a worthy one. I sincerely hope Illinois will ratify the Equal Rights Amendment.

I realize that the possibility of anything happening regarding my letter is unlikely, however, I feel that it is about time I said something.

As of January 1, 1974, it is legal to turn left on red from a one-way street to another one-way street. This law was put into effect the same time the right turn on red was. The only intersection in Des Plaines where this is permitted is behind the Des Plaines Police Station at Jefferson and Graceland Streets. When I talked to Des Plaines police about erecting a sign informing the people of this, they referred me to the state police who said that no sign could be erected because it could confuse people rather than inform them.

Please inform the folks of Des Plaines that at this intersection, a left turn on red is permitted after a full stop.

TV a tonic for Congress?

by DONALD LAMBRO

WASHINGTON — Members of Congress, glum over their plunging public confidence ratings, are thinking about televising Senate and House debates to improve their image.

Supporters of the idea say it will result in better attendance by usually absent senators and representatives and provide Americans with a new understanding of what Congress is all about.

But a major concern is a recent Harris poll showing public confidence in the lawmakers has dropped to 20 per cent, a rating lower than President Nixon's.

Among the ideas raised during recent hearings was establishing a special channel solely for congressional proceedings.

But network executives are urging that the doors to both chambers be opened to their cameras on an equal footing with the print media, and that they will decide when and what to televise.

A few skeptical members, though, think television coverage would be an "absolute bore."

only medium that can carry such a message for us effectively."

Muskie said he could "conceive, even, of a public television network controlled by Congress offering nothing but views of Congress at work." Network executives and some members, however, quickly opposed the idea of a congressional network.

There are a few members, however, who are saying that all the television exposure possible won't bolster the public's sagging confidence in Congress.

"What we need is not another huge institutional public relations machine," said Sen. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., "but rather specific reforms which help the people understand what we are doing and why we are doing it." (UPI)

Tom Wellman's column

A route around death

On paper, the idea of organizing our lives to make it easier to cope with death seems like a reasonable, rational step.

Death and its details are the segments of our life for which we've never been able to plan. Traditionally, death has always been feared and misunderstood. We've viewed it as evil darkness, when too often, for those approaching it, it has been a blessing.

Because of the very unpredictable nature of death, we've allowed the funeral industry to develop a mythology about the necessity of expensive caskets, embalming and the like. If we believe this mythology, there can be no quiet death, but only a public, noisy, gaudy scene.

However, as outlined by Herald staff writer Karen Blecha recently, there is an alternative. It is called "death with dignity," and it is an opportunity to avoid the indignities which a slow, painful death can produce.

This plan includes a "living will," which permits a person to sign oneself into a program which allows the "plugs to be pulled" — that is, extensive medical treatment merely designed to preserve the life of a terminally ill patient can be ended, according to the living will.

Founders of the program emphasize it is a strictly voluntary program. It is designed, they say, to allow one to plan death in a manner not possible before.

Death with dignity. To anyone who has had a friend or relative die slowly and painfully — and with no hope of recovery — the plan sounds like a good out, as a method of terminating life when life no longer should continue. If you leave possible religious objections aside, it seems like a worthy alternative.

It is not a program, however, to which physicians will publicly offer support, and the implications of it were illustrated last week in Maine when a malformed baby died after court-ordered surgery had failed.

Tom Wellman

The surgery was ordered after the child's parents refused to order surgery for the child, which was born with the entire left side of his body malformed.

Reports stated that some doctors felt the child should have been allowed to die quietly, as do many severely malformed children every year, for there was no hope that the child would have led a normal life. However, three couples offered to adopt the malformed child, which indicates there was some willingness to accept the burdens the child would impose.

The death of a child is related to death with dignity, as it poses the most difficult issue — that is, is there really a foolproof system in which the person about to die has absolute, final choice?

Obviously, in the case of the malformed child, there is no choice for that child. It is a matter for the parents to determine, for it is assumed the child has no conception of what has happened around him.

Likewise, what about the person who seeks death with dignity in a "living will," yet, close to the moment of death, decides that life is worth continuing? If the person is semi-conscious, perhaps this desire cannot be communicated to attending physicians.

Also, is there room in death with dignity to protect us from merely getting rid of the unwanted elderly — who, although feeble, are perfectly capable of leading a satisfactory life?

Obviously the death with dignity advocates have considered these dangers, and have worked in safeguards to prevent abuses. In concept, the idea's got potential for those who voluntarily wish to take leave of life when life becomes too physically painful to continue.

It should not be hastily adopted, however, for perhaps more safeguards need to be worked into the plan. And it will not be adopted too swiftly, for death, to Americans, is nothing about which hasty decisions can be made. It is too important; indeed, it is the most important topic to all of us.

$6 deduction from paycheck to pay for promotionCTA employees 'forced' to help RTA

by STEVE FORSYTH

Some employees of the Chicago Transit Authority have been forced to pay $6 for promotion of the Regional Transportation Authority referendum even though they personally oppose it.

A suburban resident who is a member of Amalgamated Transit Union Division 308 told The Herald the money was deducted from one of his paychecks in February without his knowledge — in exchange for a blue and white RTA campaign button.

The employee, who asked not to be identified, is seeking assistance from anti-RTA forces in exposing the practice. He said a union vote of only a few members approved the levy for the union's estimated 3,000 members.

THE UNION'S contribution to the RTA Citizens Committee for Better Transportation is estimated at $18,000 based on the levy.

Union Pres. Leonard Beatty said the bylaws instruct him to assess all members if an assessment is approved by vote at a union meeting. Beatty said he posted notices of the meeting two weeks in advance, although he said the notices did not mention the possibility of a vote to deduct money from the members' paychecks.

Beatty said the bylaws require only 25 members to conduct a special meeting like the Jan. 29 meeting at which the assessment was approved. "The membership told us to secure our future, and we're trying to protect our membership," he said.

Formation of the RTA is felt by most of the members to be in their own interests, Beatty said. He said he was the "small voice" that months ago urged the governor and legislative leaders to sit down and formulate an acceptable RTA plan.

George Ranney Jr., RTA committee chairman, said he was pleased to have the union's help. As for the members who didn't want to donate, "that's an internal matter with the union," he said.

ASKED IF HE would return the money to union members who didn't want to pay it, Ranney said Beatty would have to answer that question.

The RTA committee has raised several thousand dollars so far through donations from business and industrial leaders in the Chicago area, although Ranney could not give a total to date. He said there is several thousand dollars in the bank account right now.

The committee is using the money to distribute pamphlets, buy television time, and otherwise promote the RTA referendum March 19.

Solar or nuclear development urged

by BARRY SIGALE

The development of either solar or nuclear energy is needed to provide the long term or ultimate solution to our energy problems, according to Richard M. DeVierman, director of marketing services for the Des Plaines-based Universal Oil Products Co.

Both potential power sources, he said, pose distinct questions surrounding their use but efforts should be intensified to harness them and make them available to an increasingly demanding public.

Solar energy may be "the only acceptable ultimate solution" because of "some legitimate and major unanswered questions concerning dependability, safety and environmental factors which may impede the proposed role of nuclear power," DeVierman said.

"NUCLEAR ENERGY is, of course, a reality today and is expected by many to show a large proportionate growth. Nuclear energy offers the delightful prospect of a power source unlimited by raw materials."

Because of the tremendous demand expected to be made by the U. S. population by the year 2000 (the country will, it is estimated, consume more energy in the next 26 years than it has in its entire history), DeVierman emphasized the need for a program of conservation, the development of a national energy policy to determine the best uses of our resources and the substantial intensification of effort in research and development of present and future energy sources.

He made his remarks at a function called the Green Turnip Symposium, a series of educational programs sponsored and hosted by Oakton Community College in Morton Grove. Last Thursday night's session, entitled, "The Energy Crisis: Why and What It Is," was attended by about 200 persons, a mix of students and the public.

(The UOP official said he wanted to title his talk, "The Ultimate, Definitive, Conclusive, Final, Complete, Authoritative Last Word on the Energy Crisis," but couldn't. There isn't such a thing.)

DE VIERMAN SAID the present energy crisis may be a blessing in disguise. "Think of the consequences," he said, "had it occurred five years or so from now, when we would have been much more dependant upon Middle East oil imports."

He did not dwell on the question of who is to blame for the crisis but said, "There is a great deal of conjecture and opinion regarding just who and what are responsible for our energy shortages."

"The Arabs, Israelis, the Nixon administration, legislators, the oil industry, environmental extremists, capitalists, communists, Republicans and Democrats are all being blamed. It is none of these and it is all of these."

Four major factors which are interconnected and must be considered when pondering the energy situation, DeVierman said, include technology ("without it there will be no solution"), economic, political and environmental ("re-rape of our environment in the name of expediency and energy shortages must not be permitted").

An introductory lecture on Transcendental Meditation will be given Wednesday at the Mount Prospect Country Club, 600 See-Gwun.

The lecture will be presented by Mary Ann Hueing who recently returned from Switzerland where she completed a year of study with Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, founder of Transcendental Meditation.

"Some of the most salient and beneficial aspects of TM are that it can be learned easily and enjoyed by everyone," said Miss Hueing. "It provides deep rest, allowing tension and fatigue to drop off naturally, leaving the mind and body refreshed and able to undertake more dynamic activity," she added.

ARCH triumphs for the defense

Jim: "The code word ARCH: Analyze the lead. Review the bidding. Count your winners and losers. How can I make this contract? Is also very likely to help the defense if they stop to apply it."

Oswald: "'H' becomes How can I beat this contract? Also they seldom get a chance to count both winners and losers, but they certainly can Analyze the lead and Review the bidding."

Jim: "One of the first things bridge players learn is the rule of third hand high. Then they learn when to disregard it."

Oswald: "East analyzes the lead as fourth best. He reviews the bidding and notes that South opened one notrump. East has 10 high card points as does dummy. That leaves 20 for West and South and since South's bid has shown 16-18 West can't have much. Furthermore, it looks as if his king of diamonds is the only trick the defense can take outside the spade suit."

Speaking about Real Estate

Robert L. Nelson
President
Robert L. Nelson, Real Estate

A look at the present Real Estate Buying and Selling Market by Robert L. Nelson, President, Robert L. Nelson, Real Estate.

Much has been written about the current national Real Estate Sales Market . . . most of it points a rather dismal picture especially to those who would like to buy a home but have been scared off by the "TIGHT MONEY" situation. Although we cannot speak specifically about conditions in other parts of the country, business here in the greater Northwest Chicago Suburban area is alive, healthy and continuing to remain active.

As a matter of fact, we have been busier than usual because more and more people now realize the advantages of dealing direct with an established, professional Real Estate Company that can exert the knowledge and influence necessary to consummate a satisfying Real Estate sale.

Lending institutions have opened their doors to negotiations with the leading area Real Estate offices so that mortgage money is available. We have been able to develop this availability because of our long standing trust and reputation in the Real Estate business.

WE CAN OFFER OUR CUSTOMERS UP TO 80% FINANCING TO QUALIFIED BUYERS. Don't be scared off from buying or selling your home . . . if you're in the market, we're in the business. Let us show you how much help we can be in satisfying your Real Estate requirements. DON'T BE THE LOSER . . . DON'T WAIT. Inflation and rising costs are bound to make the home you buy today much more valuable in the next few years.

Dicker, dicker, dicker

Kids flock to her door to trade cards

by BILLIE BACHHUBER

Mount Prospect may have its own Pied Piper . . . of sorts. Mrs. Robert Lunaberg, mother of two and an elementary school teacher, draws kids to her home "by the droves," she reports with a smile.

On warm afternoons, neighborhood youngsters from ages 5 to 13, congregate in the Lunabergs' backyard. And in cooler weather, kids ring the doorbell and telephone to talk and dicker with "the lady who trades cards," as they describe her.

Barbara Lunaberg's unusual popularity with children started last August when a friend's remarks reminded her of a favorite childhood hobby, trading cards. She brought out and reactivated the 25-year-old collection she had saved.

At first, Mrs. Lunaberg didn't recognize the value of her "treasure," and she gave the 300-card collection to her daughter, Diane, who's 7. Avid collectors quickly grabbed 50 to 75 originals as they discovered the old cards they value most.

"I decided to hang on to the rest!" Barbara chuckled as she recalled her re-introduction to trading.

SO, MRS. LUNABERG and Diane started new collections, and both now trade cards with other enthusiastic neighborhood collectors. (Mother already has accumulated some 1,600 cards. Diane collects regulars and "peewees," small versions of the same.)

A woman who radiates a happy disposition, Barbara Lunaberg explained the lure of her reclaimed hobby. She likes children very much. And though she works at a number of serious pursuits, she has retained a childlike delight in simple pleasures as well. "If you like it, do it!" is her unapologetic philosophy for fun.

Barbara truly enjoys trading cards with her friends, and she communicates her enthusiasm. Cards are traded for the designs and pictures printed on the back. (Faces are either blank, the most valued, or are regular playing cards.)

The objecting of collecting is to amass as many different kinds of cards as possible. An important goal for the collector is to "match" cards in pairs, sometimes collecting in threes and fours. The latter can be saved for trading along with singles, she pointed out. Collectors compile the designs they like best.

SNOOPY AND CHARLIE Brown cards go over "big" with today's youngsters. Other designs they treasure include Americana, still life, florals, pastoral scenes, scenes from other cultures and countries, to list a few. Most popular with contemporary kids — as well as those in Barbara's youth — are animal cards, primarily, dogs, cats and horses, she noted.

Barbara reported a real coup recently when she and Marge Elkins of Elk Grove Village, another adult trader, matched odd cards they each found in their respective childhood collections. Barbara's Collie Dog with a special border and her Cat and Dog Combo with polka dot background now have matches after 25 years! And both Barbara and Marge, who learned from a friend of Barb's interest now save cards for one another.

"I keep a special Save-for-Marge pile," Mrs. Lunaberg confided with a giggle.

Trading cards can be purchased. When Barbara was a child, she bought cards — each with a different design or picture and a blank face — for 10 cents a package. Now she pays from $1 to $3 for two decks. So popular that they sell out almost as fast as they get them, trading cards can be purchased at Marshall Field's, Turnstyle and at specialty shops, Mrs. Lunaberg advised.

A POPULAR SOURCE for cards are the airlines, some of which distribute free decks to passengers. According to Mrs. Lunaberg, Delta Airlines cards are most sought after because each deck is decorated with a scene from a different city.

The name of the game is fun . . . and challenge, for the card trader, the trading card lady said.

On the serious side, Barbara Lunaberg substitute teaches in District 26. She and husband Bob, an instructional specialist for IBM, team teach Sunday School at Prospect Heights Community Church.

Because their 9-year-old son, Bobby, is deaf, the couple also give much time and effort to education for the deaf.

An amateur inventor, Bob dreams up and makes gadgets in his workshop to help educate deaf children. These gadgets are utilized at Northwestern University. He also photographs, writes, produces, and presents slide programs about the deaf.

BARBARA, WHO HOPES eventually to earn a master's in MRS. BARBARA LUNABERG negotiates a trade with one of her neighborhood fans, Kathy Franks, a 7th grader. A childhood card collection she had kept prompted Barbara to take up her old hobby again.

OBJECT OF the trading card game is to collect as many kinds as possible, preferably pairs. Extras of one pattern can be used to trade for designs that match odd ones in the hobbyist's collection.

ANIMAL CARDS are favorites with today's young collectors, just as they were in Barbara Lunaberg's childhood. Cards may be bought too.

deaf education, has served as treasurer and vice president for STRIDE (Steps Toward Research in Deaf Education), an organization which raises money to provide extraordinary services for the deaf.

At home, Barbara sews and has started an antique collection, a cherry table and a Victorian desk being two favorites.

She and Bob share in annual home improvement projects, the most recent building in shelves and cupboards in the family room. They hope next to create a recreation-craft area in the basement where Barbara plans to illuminate and display her trading cards on sliding racks . . . so she can still trade them, of course!

Folks stay home . . . so does fashion

The fuel shortage is reaching steadily further into the fashion forefront. In addition to the direct results such as the lack of petroleum products for production of synthetic materials, there are other important but less related results.

The Norman Norell fashion house has taken note that with the gas shortage, more families are entertaining at home and he intends to cash in on the trend. Collections from Norell for spring are heavily spiced with clothes for the at-home hostess and guests. Pajamas with long coats, pants and overskirts hold prominent positions in fashion for spring.

THERE HAS ALSO been increased purchase of warmer clothes — turtle necks, flannel shirts, pajamas and gowns, thermal underwear and heavy socks. The vested suit for men and the popularity of sweaters this season are not just happenstance.

Have you noticed that pants legs are becoming slimmer? That change in style is presumably an attempt to cut down on manufacturing costs. It takes 20 per cent less fabric to make slim legged pants than it does to make flares or bells. There is also a move away from the cuffed pants look for the same reason.

Another hallmark in spring fashion is the return of the short sleeve. Is this an offshoot of the fabric shortage?

White is the "in" shade for spring and it ranges from ecru to chalk. Could there be a lack of dyes plaguing the fashion world too?

The state of the economy is causing the return of the classics in plain colors and with minimal decoration. Whether this "depression look" is reflective of our times or just plain nostalgia is a question not easily answered. No matter how it works out, fashion is quite ho-hum at present. What happened to hot pants, granny gown, or the peasant look? What is the gimmick for spring '74? There just doesn't seem to be much out-of-the-ordinary — just conserving.

MARJORIE MEAD, University of Illinois clothing specialist offers these tips for getting the most out of your clothing and fabric dollar.

—Study your present wardrobe and plan around basics and accessories instead of individual costumes. Coordinate your purchases with clothes already on hand.

—Shop sales now. Substantial savings are possible, considering the predicted price hikes. Also compare prices, values, merchandise and services at several stores, or use catalogs for comparing.

—Buy classic designs rather than fad items. Keep in mind how the garment will be used. Select the best quality you can afford for the items you wear often. If you buy faddish garments, accept lower quality. Clothes that will be outgrown, also can be of lower quality, unless you plan to "hand them down."

Fashion

by Karen

—Invest in the natural fibers — wool and cotton. The trend is toward quality fabric rather than quantity. Learn more about fabrics, fibers and fabric finishes. How long will they last? Read labels and hang tags to make better decisions.

—"Eyes cross if they are going to cross." The old wives' tale was that a baby gets cross-eyed if objects are placed too close to his face.

—"Babies may have sore gums when they are teething, but most fevers are due to viruses." The old wives' tale was that babies have a fever when they are teething.

—"If the floor is fairly clean, your toddler does not need to wear shoes." Old wives' tale held that babies must have stiff shoes when they first walk or they will become flat-footed.

—"BEATING A CHILD for poor school performance is like scolding him for getting the mumps." Old wives' tale — use the hickory stick.

—"If Edison had not been thrown out of school, we might still be using candles."

If the old car must go, let it be with dignity

Death with dignity is a big issue these days. And I believe it is everyone's right to have. Therefore I couldn't complain when, last Wednesday, as I jumped into the car to get some groceries, pick up the dry cleaning and have a broken window repaired, the old car sighed and died.

My first thought was that I was glad I wasn't going any place important, such as the beauty shop or out for lunch. My second thought was that it was terribly decent of the car to expire in our garage rather than on an expressway or straddling a railroad track. My third thought was that I had a moral obligation — 97,000 miles worth — to see if I could revive it.

I got out and felt for the hood release under the front bumper and found an enormous cobweb. I persisted though, raised the hood and peered inside.

NOW TO ME, under the hood of a car is sort of like a movie theater that shows only X-rated movies: I know more or less what goes on in there, but I'd rather not watch. But I looked under anyway. The motor was running, but the car wouldn't move so I presumed I should look for trouble in the transmission — if I had known what the transmission looked like. Suddenly I spotted some oily looking stuff on the floor and made a prompt diagnosis.

"I want some transmission fluid," I repeated to the disbelieving mechanic at the gas station a few blocks from the house. I explained the car's problem and asked how much fluid I should put in and where I should put it. As we talked, I could tell he couldn't wait to tell his wife about this one!

"Now do you have anything to put it in with?" he asked.

I suggested a funnel and he was visibly impressed with my mechanical know-how.

Then he asked, "How will you open the can?"

I'M SURE HE WAS trying to be helpful, but I was a little annoyed with that question. Anyone willing to mess with a car's transmission surely must be able to open a can!

When I got home with the fluid, I went to work, hanging a trouble light from the raised hood and putting a cloth over the fender so my coat buttons wouldn't scratch the car's age-worn surface. Then I added the fluid.

It didn't work.

When my husband got home, we consulted our auto general practitioner who suggested we call a specialist. The specialist took a look at the car, assessed its general condition and gently suggested we drain the gas and give it up.

That was difficult to do. The car and I had seen a lot of miles together, and I actually cried when they unplugged the trouble light and towed it away for the last time.

My husband was understanding and pointed out that the car had lived a long and full life. He also reminded me how graciously it had expired.

When I think about it, I am glad. I believe that's the way we all want to go.

Pediatrician writes some new wives' tales for parents

by PATRICIA MCCORMACK

Make way for a book that allows a little freedom in child-raising. For the parents — and child.

"New Wives' Tales" (Prentice-Hall) by Dr. Lendon H. Smith, a pediatrician, even entertains. It also fills you with common sense solutions to problems — be they in the area of the potty, playpen or sandbox.

Dr. Smith has been in pediatrics since 1951 in Portland, Ore. He is professor of pediatrics at University of Oregon Medical School and has written other books for parents.

He says there is a need for new wives' tales for a simple reason. The old ones don't apply anymore.

There are some ground rules when you take the child to the doctor. To wit:

—Ask for the doctor's help. Appeal to the Albert Schweitzer humanitarian sometimes latent under the scientist.

—NEVER STATE the diagnosis; that is his job and the main reason he or she stays in business.

—Try to list the problems separately and in order of appearance.

—Let the doctor decide if the patient needs to be examined.

Some new wives' tales:

—"When all else fails, treat the doctor as a sane, intelligent human being who may be saddled with a few old wives' tales himself."

—"Take pictures of the baby; he'll never be that cute again." The old wives' tale about this was that bright lights from a flashbulb will damage a baby's eyes.

Clean humidifier regularly to minimize spore growth

Dear Dorothy: Caught in the middle of this energy flap, there must be many as confused as I am as to whether humidity in a house is good or bad. On the one hand, I read that I ought to install a humidifier to make lower heat more comfortable — and that it will be healthier for family, furniture, plants and so on. But on the other side, I now read that humidifiers can be a health hazard. You seem to turn up the strangest information. I hope you can apply yourself to this one. —Nancy Hiltzig

"Strange?" And here I thought I was an eminently practical researcher. Anyway, Nancy, as with everything else there are two sides to the story. Yes, proper humidity is important — for health, furniture and so on. But mild spores are present always and they gravitate automatically to moisture, where they proliferate. People allergic to particular molds can be made dreadfully uncomfortable and, apparently, it can be the cause of allergic lung ailments. It can come from air conditioners, too. The way to minimize spore growth is to clean out such water reservoirs on a fairly regular basis.

Dear Dorothy: Is there anything that can be done about the puckering of the bands in the ends of bath towels? Mine are practically new, but look awful crinkled up. —Edith Whitbeck Haven't you had these stored away for some time? Since the manufacturers changed methods in toweling a few years ago, this is rarely reported these days. I don't think there is any "cure" for yours.

Dear Dorothy: Do you know the Southern recipe for cooking "fat-back?" —Sylvia Grant Haven't got a clue. Can our readers help on this one?

St. Viator, Elk Grove 4th in team battles

Two state champs! Tanker Fitzsimons, matman Morris

Swimming Editor

When the medals had been passed out to the final event finishers, a single line of swimmers threaded its way along the narrow path next to Evanston's pool.

Mixed among the Hinsdale Central winners of the 400 freestyle relay were four St. Viator swimmers, the second-place finishers.

Walking with the great perennial state champions might be a foreshadowing of things to come for this Arlington Heights parochial high school. The Lions of head coach John Fleck nearly missed a consolation team trophy with a sparkling fourth place in the overall standings at the state swimming and diving finals Saturday.

As one state official was overheard to say afterwards, "Just mark my words. In a couple of years, St. Viator will be No. 2."

Ed Fitzsimons paced the Lions with a first in the 50-yard freestyle and a second in the 100-yard freestyle.

Big individual point productions by three other area schools' stars also brought all-time high team finishes. Arlington was 11th with 26 points, Elk Grove shared 15th with three others with 18 points and Forest View was tied with another trio for 21st with 12 points.

The only other area team to score was Maine North, which equalled its highest finish with 38th with three markers.

Fitzsimons, a senior, didn't enjoy his fastest takeoff in the 50 freestyle. However, a false start on Friday made him more cautious at the beginning of this speed event.

The lanky sprinter quickly made up for the split second delay, covering the first 25 yards in 10.6 — the fastest he's gone this year, according to Fleck. As he neared the wall, he had pulled even with the competition.

Taking a superb deep turn, he ricocheted off the side of the pool like a bullet. Then he pulled away from the pack for an impressive finish. His time of 21.8 was 2/10ths of second of the winning effort by Prospect's Rick Fox, the first Herald area champion (outside of the Des Plaines area) in swimming.

"I'm glad that's over with," said a relieved Fleck. "He's sky high."

However, so was Peoria Richwoods' Jim Bucher, winner of the individual medley. Bucher came on strong in the 100-yard freestyle to touch out Fitzsimons, 48.3 to 48.5, thus ruining the big guy's shot at a rare double.

Fleck was equally proud of the accomplishment of the 400 freestyle relay team. "They all swam tremendous," he babbled.

Although taking second, the efforts of Rick Yasky, Chris Kenney, Mark Rohl and Fitzsimons — a 3:18.7 — would easily have won most state meets in the country.

Other point-getters for St. Viator were Yasky with fourth in the 200-yard freestyle (1:48.1) and seventh in the 500-yard freestyle and Rohl with ninth in the 100-yard freestyle (49.9).

Needless to say, Fleck said he was super proud of all his competitors. He was only sorry that his team couldn't have finished third. Lyons of LaGrange edged out the Lions with five more points or 82. New Trier East was second with 92 and Hinsdale Central more than doubled New Trier's total with 235.

Arlington nearly finished in the top 10, missing by just nine points. Coach Don Andersen saw his two star performers — Joe Nitch and Charlie Dunn — account for all the Cardinals' points.

Gren 126-pounder triumphs

by KEITH REINHARD
Wrestling Editor

Rick Morris of Elk Grove battled to a stunning 6-5 victory over East Leyden's touted Al Riccomini and then turned back Libertyville's Dale Eggert by the same score in the finals to win a state wrestling crown at Champaign Saturday.

The powerful Grenadier junior hooked up with teammate Leo Montemayor to pull off a fourth place finish for Elk Grove in the team standings, missing a runnerup trophy by a scant two points. Montemayor also battled his way into the championship round.

All told, six Mid-Suburban League grapplers finished among the top five at their respective weights... out of 10 who began the rugged climb Friday afternoon. Amazingly, four of the six are juniors.

Morris, who finished up the year with a dazzling 28-2 mark, was hardly threatened en route to the 126-pound semifinals. He pinned Ron Brown of Rock Falls in his opener and stomped Dave Thomas of Springfield East 12-4 to earn a crack at the undefeated Riccomini.

Montemayor, also a junior, kept impressive pace with Morris all the way into the finals at 145, pinning, winning 12-4 and pinning again before falling victim to Ed Beeks of Rich Central 5-4 in overtime in the finals.

Also placing from the MSL were junior Mark Furlong, of Hersey, junior Terry

Rick Morris

Ruddy of Schaumburg, Ken Smith of Wheeling and John Beck of Conant.

Furlong, at 138, collected a third place prize, marking the fourth straight year a Huskie has finished in the money at the state finals. Ruddy at 112 and Smith at 157 both wound up with fourths while Beck garnered only fifth at 132, despite losing only one match in four at the tournament.

Team champion at the 37th annual gathering was Rich Central. Beeks turned out to be their only champ but they placed three matmen in the finals and had first place laurels actually sewed up before the last session commenced.

Oak Lawn placed second, a distant 10 points behind the champs with 31. Joliet West was third with 30½ and John Moore's Elk Grove club netted 30 points. The two, three and four teams all had only two representatives at Champaign.

And as surprising as Rich Central's easy team title came, so was East Leyden's slip to fifth place in the rankings. The Eagles had brought in five entries including four sectional champs.

Two other local wrestlers, Gary Evans of Schaumburg at 105 and Bob Daulton of Buffalo Grove at 98, posted victories but did not place in the tournament.

Maine East's Jay Check at 119 and Ron Grant at heavyweight, Maine West's Stan Cordts at heavyweight, Arlington's Mike Bryan at 112 and Palatine's Lon Marchel at 155 were the other area representatives. All were stopped in the first round and did not wrestle back.

Total attendance for the two-day gathering, which included Class A championship competition for the first time, was a record-breaking 33,263 including nearly 10,000 for the final session. More details and photos of the meet will appear Wednesday.

KING FOR A DAY. Rolling Meadows' Mike Godawa establishes a new state record in all-around Friday with an 8.69 average, including an 8.95 for his parallel bar routine. But Niles West's Bart Conner regained the honor with an 8.78 average just 24 hours later.

Hersey stuffs 16 gymnasts into state meet showdown

The Mid-Suburban League will be armed with 59 state qualifying berths for the 17th annual Illinois High School Association State Gymnastics Meet Friday and Saturday at Prospect High School after a very successful weekend of demanding sectional competition.

Hersey leads the entire state in qualifying positions with a robust total of 16 based on nine "ranked" and seven "at-large" berths.

Four-time defending state champion Hinsdale Central looms ominously behind the Huskies with 15 reservations. The area is also fortified by Rolling Meadows' 11, Elk Grove's nine, six by Prospect and Conant, Arlington's four, three by Wheeling and one each by Forest View, Fremd, Maine East, Palatine and Schaumburg.

The Huskies rolled through the Rolling

Meadows Sectional Thursday and Friday with a whopping 122 points, based on 11 for first, nine for second, eight for third, etc.

Rolling Meadows finished second with 93.5, Prospect third with 35.5, Conant fourth with 33.5, Arlington fifth with 33, Wheeling sixth with 19, Schaumburg eighth with 10, Fremd 10th with 8.5 and Palatine 11th with 6.5.

Elk Grove journeyed to Niles West for its sectional trophy with a winning total of 76.5. In that meet, Niles West's Bart Conner established a new state (and possibly nation) record in all-around with an incredible 8.78 average for five events. He's only a sophomore!

The individual achievement barely overshadowed the equally dazzling display by defending state all-around champion Mike Godawa of Rolling Meadows.

Technically, Godawa set the new state all-around standard Friday night when he hit 8.15 in floor exercise, 8.35 on side horse, 9.15 on high bar, 8.95 on parallel bars and 8.85 on rings for a blistering 8.69 average, but Conner edged him into second with his performance Saturday.

The ticket to the state meet for the gymnasts was very high-priced. To qualify in floor exercise, only those scoring 8.25 in the four sectionals were admitted.

The password on side horse was 7.95 with 7.8 earning a berth on horizontal bar. Trampolinists needed to bounce to at least an 8.05 to get the green light to Prospect, an 8.0 separated the men from the boys on parallel bars, a steep 8.15 earned a berth on rings and a stiff 7.02 cutoff in all-around was the make-or-break point.

For details of the Rolling Meadows and Niles West Sectionals, the complete lineup of state qualifiers and pictures, read tomorrow's "Spotlight on Gymnastics" page in the Herald Sports section.

Tourney time; regional play begins Tuesday

The Illinois High School Association Class AA basketball tournament gets under way locally tomorrow night with four area schools hosting regional tourneys.

The culmination of more than three months of basketball competition, the tournament gives each high school in the state an equal chance for the championship. The state tournament is the time for big surprises, joy, tears, and disappointment.

Dreams are made and shattered, hopes are nurtured and dashed on the long road to the finals in Champaign. For several area schools, the journey begins tomorrow evening.

At the Schaumburg Regional Tuesday night, Mid-Suburban League champ Conant will meet Schaumburg, and on Wednesday, Palatine takes on Fremd. The two winners will face off on Friday for the title. All three games at Schaumburg will start at 7:30 p.m.

In the Forest View Regional, two games will be contested Tuesday. First, at 7 p.m., Buffalo Grove goes against Forest View, then St. Viator tangles with Wheeling. The winner of the Buffalo Grove-Forest View game will meet Arlington in Wednesday night action commencing at 7:30. The Friday championship game will be a battle between the winner of the Wednesday game and the winner of the St. Viator-Wheeling match, starting at 7:30.

The regional at Hersey will feature a clash between Rolling Meadows and Hersey on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. On Wednesday, Elk Grove will face Prospect at 7:30, and the two winners will meet at the same time Friday for the title.

The Notre Dame Regional will see Maine West and Maine North do battle at 7 p.m. Tuesday, followed the same night by Maine South against Maine East. On Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. Notre Dame will meet the winner of the Maine West-Maine North game. The victor of that contest will confront the winner of the Maine South-Maine East game for the championship again at 7:30.

The regionals are just the beginning. Next comes the sectional tourneys, and afterwards, the super-sectionals. It all leads to Champaign.

On March 23, the state of Illinois will crown a Class AA champ. Let it begin here.

POURING IT ON in the backstroke segment of the 200-yard individual medley is Elk Grove's Scott Bolin. The versatile Grenadier senior finished fourth at the state meet Saturday in the IM and took fifth in the backstroke for his team's only points. (Photo by Jim Frost) sixth of Doug Rice, who turned the trick in 1963 in the now defunct 400-yard freestyle.

Only a junior, Nitch took seventh in the consolation championships in the 200-yard freestyle (1:50.2).

Dunn, who for four years has been doing the job for the Arlington varsity, just missed qualifying for the championship finals in both his specialties. He was seventh in the consolation battle of the individual medley (2:54.9) and 10th in the 100-yard backstroke (57.7).

Dunn's Mid-Suburban League rival, friend and personal nemesis — Scott Bolin — reached the finals in both events, leading Elk Grove to all of its points. Bolin, also a senior, was fourth in the IM (2:02.8) and fifth in the backstroke (56.9). Both of Bolin's efforts netted medals.

The second most impressive one-man show was turned in by Doug Schlack of Forest View. The senior sprinter was fourth in the 100-yard freestyle (48.8) and seventh in the 50-yard freestyle (22.6), the best showing ever by a Falcon.

Maine North's John Monaghan was 10th in the 50-yard freestyle (23.0).

Maine East, Maine West, Hersey and Wheeling failed to score. East's Chris Dickson was 18th among the 44 divers competing. Arlington's Jeff Munk was 18th followed by Hersey's Jeff Speakman in 26th and Tom Brennan in 41st.

After Hinsdale, New Trier, Lyons and St. Viator, the rest of the top 25 teams looked like this:

Moline 58, Peoria Richwoods 58, Rock Island 56, Peoria High 40, Thornridge 35, Arlington 26, Marmion 25, Morton West 25, Glenbrook North 23, Elk Grove 21, Sandburg 21, Niles North 21, Evanston 21, Naperville 17, Forest View 12, Oak Park 12, Glenbrook South 12, Hillcrest 12, Rockford Gullford 11, Urbana 11, Marion 10 and Quincy 10.

Arlington, Hersey tune up for tournaments with wins

Cards shake off title setback to top touted Hinsdale Central

by DWIGHT B. ESAU
Who says non-conference basketball games are meaningless?

Not Arlington's George Zigman and his gutsy bunch of round-ballers. Consider this, Cardinal fans. Your favorites, sky high for the "Conant confrontation" last Tuesday for the Mid-Suburban League championship, were shocked into disaster by that last-second rebound, 84-63.

So what's next? Just the tough, well-drilled Hinsdale Central Red Devils, that's who. A 9-3 team in the competent West Suburban Conference, where they might have won a championship. A team with 6-7 Phil Coffin who can shoot from anywhere and 6-foot Chuck Fritz who can do anything on a court.

And so the Cards, led by a brilliant Jeff Cleveland with 27 points, were equal to the challenge, 70-62. And the best part of it all was the fact that they got a lead, protected it during a furious Red Devil rally in the fourth quarter, and then salted the game away with some careful, control-style, let's-wait-for-the-right-shot basketball at the finish.

"Tonight we kept up the tempo and kept going for the basket, but we did it carefully," said a much happier Zigman. "We let them get within one and then we hung in there and kept control. This puts us in a much better frame of mind as we approach the regional."

He referred to the five-team Forest View Regional which opens Tuesday. The Cards Wednesday play the winner of the Forest View-Buffalo Grove game.

"We just got a good all-around game from everyone Friday," Zigman enthused. "Cleveland gave us a lot of points. (Doug) Betters did some nice rebounding in the second half. (Don) Donahue hit the boards well all night, and our guards (Steve Loughman, Jerry DeSimone, and sub Jay Cellotoni) handled the pressure very well."

The Red Devils, who don't run as much as many teams and play a more deliberate style, only led once but they always stayed close enough to keep it interesting.

A few fast-break baskets by Cleveland and Loughman got the Cards out to a 12-6 lead early, but three long jumpers by Coffin kept it close at 18-15 at the quarter. The Cards weren't getting the ball inside to Donahue and Cleveland often enough to make their height advantage count.

Zigman pointed this out at the break, and the Cards listened and started to feed the big boys. Big Dan got five quick baskets, and the Cards were up by six at the half.

In the third quarter, Cleveland hit four more from all angles and the Cards, moving well with and without the ball, raced out to a 49-35 lead. But the Devils, led by the pesky Fritz, suddenly got hot and out-scored Arlington 15-5 in the next few minutes to close within 54-50 early in the final quarter. Substitute John Myers stole the ball and hit a layup with four minutes left to make it 57-54. Cards and the small but loud Devil contingent was making lots of noise.

Cleveland, in one of the few mistakes he made all night, tried a difficult long jumper and Zigman called time to steady his gang.

Sure enough. The rest was all Cards. They slowed down the tempo to set up a good shot, and Loughman cashed an easy crumple to make it 65-57 with one minute left. Cleveland, Donahue, and DeSimone hit nine of 12 free throws toward the end to help keep Hinsdale safely behind.

Now the regionals. But Zigman is worried. "Forest View has beaten everybody around at least once, and they are on their own court. And Wheeling is always tough. We will have our problems."

But Friday's tough game, and win, was a good thing, the coach said. "It sharpened us, and gave us a positive attitude. The schedule worked out real fine for us."

Huskies move past Barrington with dazzling defensive play

by ART MUGALIAN

Webster's Eighth Collegiate says a "poacher" is someone who "steals game." If that definition is correct, the Hersey basketball team may want to change its nickname to the Poachers, because they certainly stole the game at Barrington Friday.

Coach Roger Steingraber couldn't deny that his Huskies were poaching on Bronco territory as they swiped the ball 19 times, forcing 39 turnovers altogether. Hersey defined the meaning of defense, with illustrations, for Bruce Stahmer's Barrington squad, beating them, in a word, 56-39.

The Huskies employed all the quickness, guile, and cunning at their command — which is a lot — to thwart the Bronco attack, pilfering passes, blocking shots, and controlling the defensive backboards.

Leading the way for Hersey was 6-foot-11 center Dave Corzine. The big senior intimidated the smaller Broncos, coercing them into bad shots and poor passes. Also involved in the defensive larceny were backcourt Huskies Tim Conard and Mark Krause. The two guards were gadflies in the Barrington works with their arms flailing and their feet constantly on the move.

When it came to scoring, Conard took the fore, along with teammate Rich Madison. None of the Hersey cagers were hitting in the cold first quarter, which saw the Huskies take a narrow 12-7 lead, but Madison plunked in eight points in the second quarter and Conard notched four baskets of his own in the third period.

Barrington never could get a proper hold on the basketball in the first half, at least not long enough to put the leather through the hoop, and they trailed at the half, 33-15.

Hersey subs played much of the second half, shuttling in and out, and they helped build the team's edge to 47-19 at one point. But some solid basketball playing by Broncos John Tichy and Greg Goldman cut the victory margin to a respectable 17 points by game's end.

The Huskies increased their winning record to 14-9 this season, paced by Conard's 14 points, Madison's 13, and Corzine's nine. Clyde Glass had six points and Bill Seiler chipped in five. Corzine grabbed 13 rebounds to lead both teams in that department.

For Stahmer's Broncos, the loss dropped them into a 12-12 deadlock with this year's competition. Barrington, only 6-7 in the North Suburban League, is suffering through an off-season with no returning starters from last year.

The 6-foot-4 Tichy, the Broncos' top scorer, had 11, while Goldman contributed six as a reservist. Mark Salstrand, also 6-4, netted six more.

Hersey will open regional play by hosting Rolling Meadows Tuesday night at 7:30 at the Hersey gym. Barrington meets Crystal Lake Wednesday at the Rockford Jefferson regional.

Bison fall to Wauconda

It was not quite what Paul Grady had in mind as a wrapup to the regular season.

"No excuses. We knew we had a chance to win and just didn't play very well," said Grady after his Buffalo Grove Bison dropped a 42-35 non-conference decision Friday evening to Wauconda.

The young Bison, who open in regional tourney play Tuesday at Forest View, couldn't buy a basket, shooting only 25 per cent, in seeing its overall record slip to 3-18.

"We had the shots, but nothing would go in," said Grady. "It's hard to come up with anything positive from this game. That probably was the worst team we've played this year, they only shot 32 per cent, and they still won the game."

"We've usually done a decent job this year in games when we knew we had a chance to win, but that wasn't the case this time. And the kids know they played poorly."

Wauconda had a 6-4 lead after one period and was on top 16-13 at halftime in the low-scoring engagement. Buffalo Grove fell behind by eight after three periods.

Brian Allsmiller was high for the Bison with eight points. He also pulled down 14 rebounds.

Wheeling trackmen top Elk Grove, Arlington

by ART MUGALIAN

Track and Field Editor

Springtime made a surprising visit to the Herald track and field action is held indoors these days, the running and jumping fever is beginning to spread.

It may have been nice enough outside, but Wheeling hosted the season's first Mid-Suburban League indoor triangular meet over the weekend, and Jim Nagel's Wildcats stomped Elk Grove and Arlington, with 68½ points to 41 for the Grenadiers and 32½ for the Cardinals.

Wheeling won on the strength of eight first place spots, including a pair of victories by August Zicarelli in the mile and the 880 run (4:49.1 and 2:06.5). "He's only a junior," said Nagel, "and he's a good one in the mile and in the half."

The coach was particularly pleased with Zicarelli's 880 clocking.

John Lortz, the only high jumper to place, reached the six-foot mark. The young Wildcat broke a school record two weeks ago at 6-2. Wheeling's Rich Reese won the two mile in 10:17.4 and he came in second in the mile (4:51). "Reese is just a sophomore and he's undefeated in the two-mile," said his coach. "I'll be anxious to see how he does against teams like Fremd."

Other Wildcat firsts were turned in by Bill Frank in the triple jump (37-2¼), Jim Lemke in the 50-yard high hurdles (:07.1), Art Subrin in the 50-yard dash (:06.7), and the four-lap relay team — Frank, Subrin, Pete Piet, and Mike Fabian ran the race in 1:11.8.

"I think we're going to surprise a lot of people," Nagel noted. "Our distance runners, for instance, are starting to come around." Wheeling also captured four second place finishes — Frank long jumped 19-3¼, Bruce Messenger ran the two mile in 10:31.5, Mark Dunsmore dashed :56.6 in the 440, and Frank was runnerup in the low hurdles at :06.7.

Elk Grove's three firsts were recorded by Dave King in the 50-yard lows (:06.5), Jim Raetzman in the 440 (:56.3), and John Groenhof in the shot put (46-11¼). Jim Wendler's Grens grabbed second spots on seven occasions, including a couple by Brian Walther who pole vaulted 11-6 and triple jumped 36-4¼.

Arlington's third place performance came in the Cards' opening meet of the year. Bruce Samore's boys managed two individual wins and a victory in the 12-lap relay. Craig Bernhardt took top spot in the long jump at 19-4¼ and Dave Hillert notched a win in the pole vault clearing the bar at 12 feet.

HERSEY WON ITS second straight indoor meet, nudging Schaumburg, 61-56, by dominating nine out of 14 events on the Huskies' home track Thursday.

Jim DiLenge won three individual firsts and one third. The versatile Husky could only get a third spot in the 50-yard low hurdles, but his time of :06.5 was only a tenth of a second off the winning pace of teammate Craig Musser. Di-Lenge was strong enough to capture top honors in the 50-yard dash (:05.9), the triple jump (40-3), and the long jump (21-½).

"He's a real good athlete," said DiLenge's coach, Larry Travis. "He can run the 100, the 200, and, if he wanted to, he could run the 440. He could hurdle if he wanted to. I would say DiLenge is the one kid who could run in a lot of events for us."

But DiLenge doesn't have to run all those events. Hersey's Chris Cooney tangled with the Saxons' standout distance runner Arnold Jackson, and he beat him in the two mile, 9:51.9 to 9:52.9. Jackson also lost in the mile run to the Huskies' Jay McCarthy, 4:39 to 4:47.1. Schaumburg's Mike Palmer finished third in both long races (10:25.4 and 4:58).

Ed Martin, Dennis Garber's top hurdler, captured the 50-yard highs for Schaumburg in a time of :06.8, just edging out Hersey's Musser (:07.0). But Martin, in turn, lost to Musser by a tenth of a second in the lows.

Hersey's Jeff Forster won the 440 (:56.8) and Ron Stephani took the 880 (2:07.2) for the Huskies. The team of Musser, Forster, Cooney, and Hal Stembridge ran the 12-lap relay in 3:32.5 for a first.

Aside from Martin's hurdles victory, Schaumburg's first spots came in three field events and the four-lap relay. Felcho, Sanchez, Mahlig, and Rizzo ran the relay in :70.8 and they won when the Hersey team was disqualified. Scott Mielke high jumped 5-10 and beat Scott Sowers of Hersey (5-10) on fewer misses. Dave Wodek heaved the shot 48-½ for a first place and Jeff Boji pole vaulted 10 feet.

Mark Hoerich took a second for the Saxons in the 880 (2:11.2), Frank Heverer came in second in the 440 (:58.6). Martin took runnerup spots in the long jump and the triple jump (19-6 and 40-1½). Ken Jafike tossed the shot 46-3 for a second spot, and Steve Kropke pole vaulted 3-6 for a second place.

ON THE DRIVE. Steve Loughman sails past Hinsdale Central's John Myers (14) for two of his 10 points in Arlington's 70-62 victory Friday evening. The Cards shook off a tough loss to Conant in the league championship to dump the highly regarded West Suburban entry. (Photo by Tom Grieger)

Park projects begun last year may be completed, weather permitting

by JOE FRANZ

Work on a number of park projects started in Buffalo Grove last year will be resumed as soon as weather permits and should be finished by the end of summer, Park Director Stan Crosland said Friday.

Most of the projects were originally scheduled to be completed last fall, but some unpredicted construction delays prevented the work from being finished. Crosland said progress this spring and summer again will largely depend on the weather.

A Herald survey of park construction shows work is scheduled to resume at Emmerich Park and parks at Cooper Junior High School, Longfellow and Kilmer schools. In addition the park district is planning to begin work on the site adjacent to the Washington Irving School.

CONSTRUCTION at each park will vary somewhat, but most of the work consists of preparing baseball diamonds, finishing work on tennis courts and installing playground apparatus.

Crosland said work on the two baseball diamonds at Emmerich Park will begin as soon as the weather breaks and hopefully will be finished in time for the start of the Buffalo Grove Boys' Baseball Program this spring.

The same goes for the two diamonds at Cooper Junior High school.

The work at both parks consists of renovating the fields and installing new

Parks prepare to move Levitt office to Raupp Memorial

Buffalo Grove Park District officials said they will begin preparing plans for moving the Levitt Inc. sales office to the Raupp Memorial site and hope it can be done by June 1.

Levitt and Sons Inc., a developer, has agreed to donate its sales office to the village after its model homes on Strathmore Court are sold. The park district wants to use the office for a museum on the Raupp site in Lake County.

The Raupp Memorial Museum would be operated by the park district and Buffalo Grove historical society.

THE VILLAGE board last week met with the park district and agreed to give the building to the park district after the donation is made by Levitt.

The park board Thursday night passed a motion directing its architect, Roland Schapanski, to finalize plans for transporting and erecting the building on the Raupp site. The building is currently near Strathmore Court and Arlington Heights Road and has to be moved about a mile to Denham Lane in the Strathmore subdivision.

The park board in the motion said it would like to have the move completed by June so renovation can be done during the summer.

The Buffalo Grove Historical Society hopes to open the museum to the public by the end of the year. The society is seeking members and donations of articles that are of historical significance to Buffalo Grove.

Schapanski estimates it will cost between $23,000 and $28,000 to relocate the sales office on the Raupp site. The estimate includes $10,000 to $15,000 for moving, $8,000 for a foundation, $3,000 to connect utilities and $2,000 for improvements.

THE MOVING costs may seem high, but Schapanski said a building comparable to Levitt's would cost between $60,000 and $65,000 if it were to be newly constructed.

The building is one-story and covers about 23,000 square feet. The five-acre site is part of the Raupp Farm, one of the village's oldest landmarks. It was donated to the village under the condition it would be made into a memorial.

Park Director Stan Crosland said the park district is interested in putting an addition on the sales office after it is moved to the Raupp site. The room could be used for park activities and community meetings, he said.

on the free form timber and wood playground and climbing apparatus at Longfellow School. The park is the first of its kind in School Dist. 21. Work was started last fall, but was halted by winter weather. It is scheduled to be completed this spring.

Still more work is planned this spring at the Washington Irving Park site on Arlington Heights Road. The park district plans to have the drainage ditch which cuts across the middle of the 5.5-acre site moved to the south end of the property. Moving the ditch will make the site more suitable for recreation.

EVEN WITH the construction, Crosland said the site will not be usable much of the time due to poor drainage and flooding. On the south side of the school, another site will be graded and may eventually be suitable for a baseball diamond, he added.

The park district still is involved in a condemnation suit in which it is attempting to obtain an additional three acres in the Cambridge subdivision. The matter is in the courts and has not yet been resolved. The district has three acres adjacent to the land which is being condemned, but there is no access to it without the additional piece.

Village and park officials are still holding meetings with Miller Builders in an attempt to obtain additional park land in the Mill Creek subdivision. The park district has asked for five acres.

Schools OK policy banning biased educational works

by JILL BETTNER

The Dist. 21 school board has adopted a policy aimed at eliminating the use of biased educational materials in local schools in response to a request by a group of parents.

The Committee of Concerned Parents of Dist. 21, specifically concerned about sexual bias, six weeks ago appealed to the school board to enact a policy to make every effort to rid schools of materials that reflect discrimination and/or stereotyping of sex roles.

The broad policy adopted by the school board last Thursday night not only covers sexual bias, but all other forms of discrimination.

THE FOLLOWING paragraphs will be included in the Dist. 21 policy manual, a guide for school operations, as a result of the board action:

"The basic goals of all instruction in Dist. 21 schools shall be to provide equal opportunities for all students regardless of sex, race, creed, color, religion, ancestry or national origin and to fully develop each individual's capabilities and therefore encourage voluntary use of learned skills.

"The superintendent or his designee shall develop a curriculum which focuses on the implementation of stated district goals. He shall provide for systematic and continuous review of the programs of the district so as to eliminate any discrimination on account of sex, race, creed, color, religion, ancestry or national origin."

Members of the parent committee, present at the meeting, asked what procedures would be used to evaluate programs and requested that citizens be involved in the review. Supt. Kenneth Gill said the procedures have not yet been outlined and added that citizen participation is encouraged in all school affairs.

"I know there's still suspicion that exists as to what will take place on this," Gill told the committee. "But we really feel the issues you brought to us were valid and you know we've followed up on them — maybe not as quickly as you would have liked — but these are definitely pertinent issues that have raised interest not only here, but among principals, teachers and staff as well."

PARENT COMMITTEE members apparently are satisfied with the new policy.

"I say let's start implementing it," said Judy Keller, 1210 E. Burr Oak Dr., Arlington Heights. Mrs. Keller has served as one of the main spokesmen for the parent group.

Questioned as to whether the policy fulfills the purpose of the parents' original request, Mrs. Keller said, "I haven't fully digested it yet. But it's most certainly a step in the right direction."

"I don't understand how the procedures will work, but I want to make sure citizens are included," said Diane Nicholson, 574 Bernard Dr., Buffalo Grove.

Builder to petition board for sewer easement

The Buffalo Grove Village Board tonight will consider a request by Levitt and Sons Inc. to condemn property adjacent to the Strathmore Grove subdivision for a sanitary sewer easement.

Levitt has asked for the village's help in obtaining the easement because it has been unsuccessful in its negotiations with a neighboring property owner.

Levitt has been attempting to obtain the easement through a piece of property near Ill. Rte. 83 and Arlington Heights Road, south of its Koelper-Demuth parcel. The land is in Long Grove and its owner apparently wants a higher offer from Levitt.

LEVITT OFFICIALS said last week the offer to the property owner "far exceeds the fair value of the easement."

Several members of the village board have said they are opposed to condemning property for a private developer under any circumstances. Other members have said the village should consider condemnation only as a last resort.

The Strathmore Grove development will consist of 135 single-family homes and is southeast of Arlington Heights and Aptakisic roads.

In other business tonight the village board will:

- Consider the Appearance Control Commission's and the village engineer's report on the Arrowhead development at the northeast corner of Arlington Heights and Lake-Cook roads. The Chesterfield Development Corp. plans to build 284 townhouses on the site.

- Review Village Mgr. Daniel Larson's report and suggestions to resolving the access problem from the area south of Twisted Oak Lane to the Twin Groves School and park area.

- Pass an ordinance granting a height variation to developer, Richard J. Brown on the final building in the Cambridge-on-Lake development.

- Review and approve a proposal to conduct an audit for the fiscal year ending April 30, 1974.

- Review a request from Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau in Wheeling for a donation of $16,250.

- Award commendations to Buffalo Grove policemen, Floyd Merenkov, Robert Quid and Peter Lippert.

'Athlete in society' topic of discussion

The Adult Education Committee of St. Mary's School in Buffalo Grove tonight will sponsor a presentation by Phil Clark, a member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Clark will discuss "the role of today's athlete in our society." A question-and-answer period will follow his presentation.

The program will be in the school hall, 75 N. Buffalo Grove Rd., at 8 p.m.

First Stavros trial slated for March 25

by LYNN ASINOF

The first trial resulting from the recent indictments against six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials is scheduled to begin March 25.

James Stavros, indicted former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, will begin his trial before U.S. District Judge Hubert Will on that date. Stavros is facing seven counts of extortion in this trial, and will be tried separately on extortion and conspiracy charges contained in two other indictments.

One of the five other men indicted Jan. 31 with Stavros pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit extortion last week. Michael Valenza, chairman of Wheeling's environmental commission and former village trustee, entered a guilty plea after the U.S. Attorney's Office agreed to drop a second charge of extortion against him.

Stavros' attorney, Joel Murray, told The Herald Friday he does not yet know what affect Valenza's plea will have on his case. "I don't really know at this time," he said Friday. "I haven't really looked into it."

VALENZA'S PLEA, however, might substantially affect the case against Wheeling Building Director William Bieber, who is charged with Stavros in two other cases. In pleading guilty, Valenza admitted to conspiring with Bieber and others to extort $1,700 of furniture from Wickes Inc.

In addition, Assistant U.S. Atty. Steven Kadison told The Herald Valenza will be a witness for the government "if necessary."

Bieber's attorney, David Schippers, said Friday that his client does not plan to change his plea in light of Valenza's action. "It may very well be that Valenza did conspire with other people, but Bill Bieber's attitude on this thing is that he never conspired with him," Schippers said. "So how can we plead?"

Schippers admitted that Valenza's plea "is going to make it a little more difficult." He said, however, that Bieber "has said he is innocent."

SINCE BIEBER is charged with Stavros in two other conspiracy and extortion cases, Valenza's plea also may have an indirect effect on Stavros.

Attorneys representing two others named in the indictments said they did not think Valenza's admission of guilt would affect their cases.

"I read about it. It didn't strike me one way or the other," said Louis Carbonaro, representing Nicholas Phillips, a Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals employee, Phillips is charged with extorting $50,000 from Wickes Inc. He is also Stavros' cousin.

John Coghlan, the attorney representing William Hart, said "I haven't given the matter any thought one way or the other. I read it in the paper. That is the extent of my knowledge."

HART, A FORMER Wheeling trustee, is charged with conspiring with Bieber and Stavros to commit extortion against Bernard Wassmer, who purchased Duo Sign Co. from Hart in Sept. 1970.

The attorney for Ira Colitz, charged with aiding Phillips in the Wickes case, was unavailable for comment. Colitz was a member of the county zoning board of appeals, but resigned after being indicted.

In setting a date for the Stavros trial, Judge Will denied several motions including one for the dismissal of charges. He also denied Murray's request to separate the seven extortion counts against Stavros into individual cases.

While Judge Will ruled that the government must provide information on any electronic surveillance and favorable evidence, he denied Murray's request for transcripts of testimony before the grand jury.

The indictments resulted from a year-long federal grand jury investigation into alleged shakedowns of Wheeling developers and businesses.

Commuter protests rush-hour 'squeeze' play' at station by pair of trains

by KURT BAER

Hundreds of railroad commuters were caught in an uncomfortable squeeze play recently when two northwest-bound trains pulled into the Arlington Heights station at the same time.

The scheduling mixup caused no death or injury. But it was enough to unnervise at least one passenger, Jim Schrader of Buffalo Grove, who reported the incident to officials at the Chicago and North Western Ry. and asked for an investigation.

Schrader was a passenger on C&NW's No. 639 scheduled to arrive in Arlington Heights at 3:56 p.m. Last Thursday, as he and some 1,000 other commuters were getting off the train a second C&NW train pulled into the station, slowly slicing through the crowd of disembarking passengers and trapping some between the two sets of tracks.

"There was one little girl on the track who was grabbed away by a man who looked like he might have been attacking her, when actually he was probably saving her life," Schrader says.

R. A. DRENGLER, assistant division manager for the railroad and the man who investigated the incident, says the second train, followed to the letter the railroad's procedure in the case.

"The train made a complete stop before it reached the station and then proceeded at less than 5 m.p.h. We found nothing unsafe or irregular about it at all," Drengler said.

The second train, which was sound-

Schools finally adopt drug abuse policy

After two years, the Dist. 21 school board has adopted a policy regarding student drug abuse in local schools.

The board last attempted to draft a drug abuse policy in May, 1972. Because board members at the time could not agree on procedures to be used to implement the policy, discussion was dropped.

"We let it die then because we couldn't reach agreement," Supt. Kenneth Gill said Friday.

The issue came up again only recently because the school board is in the process of updating its policy manual and is required to have some kind of statement on student drug abuse. The new policy enacted last Thursday night by the school board reads:

"Students may not sell, purchase, possess or use behavior affecting drugs (including but not exclusively marijuana, narcotics and hallucinogens) while on Dist. 21 property or while under the supervision of Dist. 21 personnel without filing written authorization for such possession or use, signed by a licensed physician, with the principal of the school or other Dist. 21 supervisor acting in the place of the principal."

Procedures for carrying out the new policy will be worked out "in the very near future," according to Gill. The superintendent predicted further debate between board members over such issues as how drug overdose cases will be handled and who will be contacted when student is caught with illegal drugs.

Much of the disagreement two years ago was over whether parents or police should be notified first when a student is found with illegal drugs in his possession.

Fall semester set to start Aug. 29

School Dist. 21 students will return to classes next fall on Thursday, Aug. 29.

The school board last Thursday night adopted the official calendar for the 1974-75 school year.

Christmas vacation will begin with the close of school Dec. 20 with students to return Jan. 6. Spring vacation is scheduled for March 28 through April 7.

The last day of classes next year will be June 13.

Charges against resident dropped

Two charges of unlawful use of a weapon against a Buffalo Grove man were dropped last week in Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Buffalo Grove police, who made the initial arrest Nov. 8, said all charges against Donald A. Whitlock, 22, of 3 Villa Verde Dr., were dismissed. Whitlock had been accused of pointing a gun at a family in a passing vehicle Nov. 4 on Ill. Rte. 53, south of the Dundee Road ramp.

The second charge came when police allegedly found a revolver protruding from under the front seat of Whitlock's car the day they arrested him.

High school speakers take 6th in tourney

Buffalo Grove High School's individual events speech team placed sixth out of 38 schools recently at a tournament at Maine South High School, Park Ridge. The team accumulated 161 points, just 13 points behind the third-place winner.

Mary Beth Lee and Debbie Santos received a second place trophy for their humorous duet acting scene, "Here Lies Jeremy Troy." Cheryl Zeken, received a second place trophy in prose reading.

Fourth-place winners included Sue Wegier in radio speaking; Sue Lesch in oratorical declamation; Joe Richard in extemporaneous speaking, and Cheryl Zeken in oration.

Students receiving a fifth-place award were Mary Beth Lee in dramatic interpretation; Jody Lorimer in prose reading; Larry Doyle in original comedy; Steve Scuderi in special occasion speaking, and Sue Wegier in verse reading.

Cooper science fair to open

The fourth annual Cooper Junior High School science fair is today at the school, 1050 W. Plum Grove Rd., Buffalo Grove.

More than 400 science projects developed by Cooper students will be in the competition.

The projects will be judged by Cooper science teachers this afternoon with the fair open to the public from 7 to 9 p.m.

Projects will be rated by the teachers according to criteria established by the Illinois Junior Academy of Science.

Those students whose projects receive top ratings will be eligible to compete in the annual Dist. 21 science fair. Winners of that competition go on to enter the statewide science fair.

Since many of the Cooper science projects are both expensive and delicate, school officials are asking that small children be carefully supervised at the fair this evening.

by KAREN BLECHA

About 400 Chicago-area teachers greeted Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., with a standing ovation yesterday as he told them "the American people are being ripped off while the government stands by" in the fuel crisis.

"The oil companies have helped create the gas shortage," Stevenson said. "The profits rise higher and the lines grow longer. The people line up at the gas stations, they line up at the bank."

Signs carrying messages of "Dial Down Profits!" "America, the land of plenty — plenty of bull!" and "Kids need heat!" waved throughout the audience of mostly teachers at Maine East High School in Park Ridge.

Stevenson was invited to this "More Gas for Less" rally to talk about his Consumer Energy Act that calls for price rollbacks on gasoline and public reforms of the oil industry.

THE RALLY was sponsored by the Illinois Education Assn., the United Auto Workers and the Amalgamated Meatcutters. The three labor groups had invited congressmen from throughout the state, but only U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10, was there. Abner Mikva, candidate for the 10th District congressional seat, also attended to answer questions.

Teachers hear Stevenson lay into oil profits, administration for 'indifference to public'

Stevenson with applause as he rapped the Nixon administration — "At times I am tempted to call the Nixon administration the Exxon administration" — for its unwillingness to fight for the consumer. He even predicted even higher gas prices for the rest of this year, saying they would probably rise 12 to 15 cents per gallon this year as they did in 1973.

"The President's program comes down to higher prices for the consumer," he said. "A policy of consumer gouging is a prescription for economic disaster. What's good for Exxon isn't always good for the country."

Stevenson urged the audience to make their support for his bill which Nixon has threatened to veto, known in Washington. He said he would personally deliver to the White House petitions with 10,000 signatures in support of oil industry reforms that had been gathered by the IEA.

STEVENSON SAID what the teachers wanted to hear: Young did not. In a question-and-answer period after the speech, Young said he would not support Stevenson's bill because it would be "counter-productive to the American free enterprise system," he said. His answer was met with boos and hisses from the audience, as were other of his answers to questions about the fuel shortage. Several times he was interrupted and the audience would not let him finish his answer.

"It's obvious you're not going to take time to listen to me," Young said. "You should get your facts straight (about the gas shortage) before making accusations."

Mikva said he would support Stevenson's bill if he is elected next November. "I am willing to slug it out with the oil industry," he said.

Teachers at the rally complained of cold classrooms and the higher cost of living because of the fuel shortage. Several said they did not know how to answer their students' questions about the gas crisis and who was to blame.

The rally was another attempt by the IEA to build nationwide support for price rollback legislation. Last month, the group demonstrated in front of the Standard Oil of Indiana building in Chicago to protest long lines at gas stations and high prices.

Doctors badger federal official on health price controls

by STEVE BROWN
They complained about the lid on rate increases. They badgered a federal official as to why they are one of the few segments of the economy still under price controls.

The scene was reminiscent of last month's demands raised by independent truckers, but instead of the scenario taking place at a truck stop, the grouse were gathered in the ballroom at the North Shore Hilton in Skokie.

About 50 doctors and hospital officials were there to listen to and question John Twinn, one of the government's chief architects for the price control on the health care industry.

TWINNAME, WHOSE breakfast meeting with the doctors was organized by U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10th, took a tough stand against the demands of medical men who clamored for a complete removal of controls on how much they could raise their rates.

The administrator of the health section of the U.S. Cost of Living Council, charged the health care industry was one of the most inflationary components of the economy before wage and price controls were instituted in 1971. He noted health care represents a $100 billion industry annually.

"Doctors fees were rising at least 50 per cent faster than the rest of the economy then," he said. He explained that the controls which now limit fee hikes to amount to 4 per cent annually appeared to be one of the few segments of the price stabilization issue which appeared to be working.

They argued that the government should allow the controls to float free. It was noted that not only have costs risen more than 4 per cent annually, but (Continued on Page 5)

Aldermen can't decide what tax will be raised

by STEVE BROWN
Des Plaines taxpayers can assure themselves they will be in for a tax increase of some sort this year, but city officials seem to be afflicted with a case of Hobson's Choice when it comes to which taxes will be hiked.

After beating back a "third time's a charm" effort to add 11 new policemen this year by Ald. Kenneth Kehe (2nd), the aldermen spent an hour debating how to find the revenue to finance the more than $400,000 in expenses they tacked on to the city's $12 million budget.

However the aldermen were not able to reach a conclusion Thursday during their third committee-of-the-whole meeting on the budget.

IT DOES APPEAR that they are focusing on three possible methods to provide the revenue for the increased manpower that has been approved for the police, fire and forestry departments.

Last week's discussion dealt chiefly with putting all the additional costs into a hike in the property taxes, raising the garbage collection fee to absorb a portion of the costs or instituting a tax on all utilities in the city.

The councilmen could opt for a combination of the three which would spread out the costs. Several aldermen argued in favor of putting the entire cost on the property tax bill, noting that such a move would allow residents additional deductions on their income tax.

Ald. Carmen Sarlo (6th) also suggested that the entire garbage collection fee be eliminated and replaced with a garbage tax which would be deductible.

HOWEVER, OTHER aldermen suggested that raising the garbage collection fee to reduce the amount of property taxes which are used to subsidize the service would not be equitable to all taxpayers in Des Plaines.

Business and apartment complexes do not receive city garbage collection and must contract with private scavenger companies for refuse collection.

The 50-cent increase in the garbage fee would produce about $80,000 in additional revenue. They presently pay about 60 per cent of the cost of garbage collection from property tax receipts. Producing additional funds through the garbage collection fee would mean the city could divert property tax money for other uses.

Ald. Robert Hinde (4th), who heads the city council's finance committee, suggested the city might explore the possibility of imposing a tax on natural gas, telephone and electric utilities.

HE ESTIMATED the city could raise about $1 million each year with a 5 per cent tax on utilities.

City Comptroller Duane Blietz indicated that such a tax may reach a broader base than the city property taxes.

"Some businesses pay a very small real estate, but they could have substantial phone bills which could produce revenue," he said.

HOWEVER, no final decision was reached on financing the new budget increases. Blietz was asked to research the possibility of placing the tax on less than all three utilities.

It was also noted that the city levy less than a five per cent utility tax if it wanted.

Environment group seeks Superblock rethinking

Members of the city's Environmental Control Commission are hoping to "influence some of the marginal aldermen to take a look at downtown redevelopment" plans and consider what may be serious environmental problems.

Letters went out to city officials this weekend signed by four members of the nine-person commission stating Superblock "is not in the best environmental interest of the people of Des Plaines."

The letters were sent despite a not-so-subtle warning from Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behrel that the fledgling commission is overstepping its bounds by investigating traffic, construction and other areas concerning Superblock.

"We feel any organization may make mistakes," said commission member Norman Parchim referring to the council. "We will be the watchdog trying to oversee things that may have been overlooked. We are providing the checks and balances. With this report we are hoping to influence some of the marginal aldermen to take a deeper look into this."

THE REPORT'S main objection is to traffic problems which commission members believe will be created by downtown development. They contend:

- Traffic will cause both air and noise pollution.
- Proposed overpasses for Miner and Thacker streets will turn Thacker into the busiest intersection in town by 1990.
- Sufficient planning has not been done concerning Prairie, Pearson and Thacker streets.
- Additional planning must be done covering pedestrian safety, parking garage ingress and egress, traffic flow control and the impact of multi-family housing proposed for the area.

The report also charges a lack of foresight by the developers for Superblock.

According to Parchim, who environmentally appraises and tests components and systems for Teletype Corp., the commission did not receive enough information on plans for waste disposal and the combustibility of materials used in the building.

HE ADDED that the present methods of construction being considered are not acceptable. "There are several alternative methods of construction available that provide energy and cost savings. We should use the newest technology available to us."

Parchim admitted there was a split in feeling on the report among commission members. Of the seven commissioners attending a meeting where the report was considered, four voted in favor, two voted against and one abstained.

Thomas Pofahl, a research chemist and former air pollution board member, voted against the report. "I don't feel traffic problems are a concern of the commission. We have a traffic commission," he said adding architectural and engineering concerns also fall beyond the scope of the commission.

THE REV. GARRY Scheuer, who was unable to attend the meeting and vote on the report, told The Herald he doesn't have enough information to make a decisive commitment one way or the other.

Rev. Scheuer pointed out that the commission is new and "we're probably going to get into some areas where we're going to have to say 'that's not our concern'."

"I do think it's necessary for the environmental commission to look at every aspect of community development from an environmental perspective. There will be many areas we will draw back from because they are outside of our expertise

State official to inspect proposed Maryville site

A representative from the Illinois Capital Development Board will visit School Dist. 26 Wednesday to take a firsthand look at the proposed site for the new Maryville School on the Maryville Academy grounds.

Fred Knocke, ICDB official in charge of the Maryville project, will review the site along with Supt. John Fridlund. Fridlund said Knocke's visit is "very encouraging" because it may signify a willingness on the part of the ICDB to approve the site for building the new school.

"I look at this as a very good and hopeful sign that we will be given the go-ahead for the site," Fridlund said Friday.

In January the ICDB ruled five-acre site at Gregory Street and River Road in Des Plaines unacceptable for building because it was composed of excessive landfill.

NEW SOIL TESTS taken at a different section of the site last month, however, revealed the land in the southeast section of the parcel was composed of less fill. The company which made the second tests, Testing Services Corp. of Wheaton, said the amount of fill in this area would not pose problems for building.

Results of the second soil tests were forwarded to the ICDB; and Knocke has since said that based on these new findings, it is "quite possible" the ICDB would reverse its earlier ruling and approve the site.

Since the second tests were taken at the site, the Chicago Archdiocese, which owns the Maryville property, has agreed to shift the entire five-acre parcel 150 feet to the east, placing it in the area with the least amount of cinderfill.

The old Maryville School, which houses wards of the state, must be replaced because it does not meet state life-safety codes.

When a site location is approved, construction of the school is expected to take about a year to complete.

Driver test site search still on; Barrington Hills?

by JULIA BAUER

Four years ago, Northwest suburban drivers thought they were about to get their own driver testing station and would no longer have to go 15 to 30 miles to state testing facilities.

Today, the Northwest suburban driver testing station is little closer to reality than it was in 1970.

The biggest single stumbling block to building the station has been a three-year search for a 40-acre site that suits state officials in both cost and location.

THE LATEST SITE to catch the state's eye is land in Barrington Hills, near Ill. Rts. 59 and 72. Earlier sites considered and abandoned over the years were in Arlington Heights and unincorporated Palatine Township.

But now, the search for other locations is on again, at least on a small scale, according to Illinois Secretary of State spokesman, Norbert Johnson.

"The fact of the matter is we're looking for other sites with less impediments," Johnson said. He's been heading the investigation of the Barrington Hills site for nearly a year, and said yesterday that the search for an alternative location has not been successful.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, when contacted by The Herald Friday, said he would call Howlett today to check on the state's progress or possible lack of it. Schlickman was instrumental in getting legislation to fund the station two years ago.

PROBLEMS WITH THE Barrington Hills location were predicted last year by members of a three-man search committee appointed under former Secretary of State John Lewis, a Republican.

Search committee members submitted a list of recommended locations to newly-elected Democratic Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett in January, 1973, but the Barrington Hills location was not one of the sites on their list.

Why? Committee members said the site was not served by sewer or water lines from the Metropolitan Sanitary District and it did not meet the committee's accessibility requirement for the bulk of the traffic which would come from the southeast. In fact, the one big thing the site did have in its favor was a low purchase price, reported at $12,000 per acre.

The committee's top recommendations cost an average of $30,000 per acre, although those sites were already improved. Last summer, Johnson predicted that the state could extend improvements to the Barrington Hills location and still spend less than it would cost for the higher-priced sites.

STATE LEGISLATORS set aside $5.3 million two years ago to buy land and build the station, when it appeared that the testing station would go on a 40-acre site west of Palatine, on Quentin Road between Northwest Highway and Dundee Road.

Poor soil conditions and pressure from local currency exchanges caused the site to be dropped, according to state officials. That location is currently scheduled for a condominium apartment project.

The final purchase and construction of the Northwest suburban site is apparently not imminent. Johnson said he had no specific target date for finalizing the purchase.

In the meantime, Northwest suburban residents must still go to Libertyville or Elgin for their driving tests.

When it is built, the Northwest suburban station will have facilities for written and on-the-road testing of drivers.

Father-son Bulls trip

The Des Plaines Park District is sponsoring a father and son trip to the Chicago Bulls basketball game against the Cleveland Cavaliers on Tuesday, March 26.

The trip is available to any park district resident on a first-come-first-serve basis. There are a limited number of tickets available. The cost of each ticket is $4 which includes transportation. The bus leaves at 6 p.m. from Rand Park.

Knights help retarded

The success of last fall's "Help the Mentally Retarded" fund drive sponsored by the Knights of Columbus has enabled the organization to distribute checks to local state programs.

Ten per cent of the money collected is sent to the Illinois State Council, who in turn help to support statewide agencies and programs dealing with mental retardation. The balance, less expenses, is distributed to programs and agencies in the immediate area.

Checks were presented to the Northwest Suburban Aid for the Retarded, the Des Plaines Park District, Boy Scout Troop 102 for mentally retarded boys, the Spred Program of St. Zachary's and St. Stephen's Churches, and the National Assn. for Down's Syndrome.

Junior high teacher brings history to life

'Hitler' invades Iroquois classroom

by LINDA PUNCH

Walk into Terry Schwab's classroom any morning and you may find Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain signing the Munich Agreement.

Or Hitler's armies invading Czechoslovakia while European diplomats meet in special session.

Or President Harry Truman pondering the use of the Atomic Bomb against Japan.

SCHWAB, a seventh grade teacher at Iroquois Junior High School believes in bringing history to life. His method: simulations of major historical events from cave man time to present.

"Simulation gives kids several ways to learn history. They can learn by reading or study or by doing," Schwab said. "Some kids learn just by watching. When we're through with the simulation, they can tell you exactly what happened."

Students prepare for the simulation by studying the background leading up to the event. For the World War II games, the class is divided up into the countries involved.

"Each group has to research their country's involvement in the war. They have to know the government's philosophy so they can form alliances and plan strategy," Schwab said.

WHILE STUDENTS can alter history in the mock-up, they are responsible for knowing the actual events. In most cases, student actions follow historical events closely, according to Schwab.

"The students see that they can change events but they are still trapped by circumstances to a certain extent," he said. "They might have ended the war sooner but they generally follow the events pretty closely."

Social studies students understand history better because they actually live the parts, the seventh grade teacher added.

"Instead of reading boring information about the Munich Conference, they actually hold the conference," he said. "It really hits home because they feel a part of it."

SCHWAB HEIGHTENS the reality by insisting students plot strategies ahead of time—ships must be deployed 20 minutes before a battle, alliances formed in advance. "It really makes them think," he said.

Schwab, who takes the part of Hitler in the World War II simulation, finds students often forget they're playing roles.

"At times, they become very emotional against me. Then they realize it's a simulation and I'm only acting a part," he said.

The idea for teaching history through simulations evolved while Schwab was teaching high school students.

"The kids seemed to enjoy getting involved rather than just sitting there and listening to me lecture," he said. "They try to beat me in the simulation — there's nothing more fabulous than beating the teacher."

"Social studies is sort of boring — this is just a way of selling the subject," he added.

OTHER SIMULATION units include World War I, the Depression, ecology and the beginnings of man. Units can last for several days or several weeks.

"In the Depression unit, the students went through the stock market crash and panic in two days," he said. "They panicked much faster than I would have liked."

Schwab said the seventh graders usually have a better grasp of history when they finish each unit.

"When the test asks for the name of the prime minister of England, the students know it — they've been talking with him the past few weeks," he said.

Doctors hit federal controls on health-care industry

the actual treatment performed by doctors has become more comprehensive and more sophisticated in recent years.

Hospital officials also noted they were in a bind because they were unable to pass along increased cost from suppliers because of the price controls.

"We have to get the government out of the business of financing medical care," said Dr. George Lagorio. He noted that much of the inflationary problems were created as a direct result of the Medicare program.

"It used to be that we could not get a person over 65 into a hospital, now we cannot get them out," he added.

HOWEVER, TWINAME indicated a, fear of what would happen to doctors fees and hospital rates if controls were removed.

"The restraints we have seen would turn into a gold rush," he said, adding that the fees and rates would jump dramatically as doctors attempted to boost rates to the highest possible level anticipating tighter controls imposed by a national health insurance plan.

Twiname said he believed some type of flexible controls are needed for the period between the time price controls are ended, which could be as soon as the end of April, and the start of a national health insurance plan.

"The public has a Jeckell and Hyde view of the medical field, they want the best health care at all costs, until they get the bill, then they call for the clamps," he said.

BOTH TWINAME and Young warned the medicine men they are vulnerable targets to some public officials.

"Many people believe that doctors and lawyers are overpaid," Young said. A spokesman for the American Medical Assn. said that "doctors are usually at the top of the income scale for all professional fields." He added that doctors earn an average of about $40,000 annually.

Despite the high incomes, doctors and hospital officials said continued controls could lead to strikes and the unionization of hospital employees.

RALPH HUTCHINS, administrator of the Skokie Valley Hospital, noted, "how can we be controlled and our suppliers not be controlled?" He also said that some hospitals have put off the purchase of new equipment because of the inability to pass along the costs because of controls.

"It could very well be possible that what you are seeing from the independent truckers this year could be repeated by doctors in three or four years," one doctor warned.

or because we do not have the mandate to handle them," he said.

THE COMMISSION is operating with broad but ill-defined powers. Last April, as aldermen abolished the Air Pollution Board and replaced it with the Environmental Controls Commission, duties were defined as "investigating complaints . . . initiate investigations . . . disseminate information."

Robert J. DiLeonardi, city corporation council, has already drafted more exact duties for the commission. His report, however, has not been presented to the city council for discussion.

The Des Plaines Plan Commission has also raised objections to some facets of the downtown redevelopment. They contend the Ellinwood Street site for a proposed $1.6 million parking would add greatly to traffic congestion.

Poor survey response puts off park plans

A survey that Mount Prospect Park District officials had hoped would steer them in the right direction for planning new programs has failed to jell.

Paul Caldwell, assistant director of parks and recreation, indicated the park district will make "no attempt to analyze" the results because of the small return of questionnaires.

Just 176 surveys were completed from almost 15,000 mailed to park district residents, for a total of 1 per cent.

"I'm afraid we can't draw any conclusions from it," Caldwell said. "There was no clear cut response and there weren't enough to get any kind of a trend."

The questionnaire, sent to residents last December, inquired about present park district facilities and programs and sought suggestions from residents on what types of programs to institute.

'Miss Jones' departs

Village, theater owner end dispute on X-film, movie goes; drop lawsuits

by JERRY THOMAS

Coming attractions at the Elk Grove Cinema may feature another X-rated movie some day, but "The Devil in Miss Jones," is off the screen.

Before she left town, "Miss Jones" created quite a controversy, was responsible for arrests and two pending lawsuits in Federal and Circuit Court.

Developments since late Thursday:

- Village officials took a Circuit Court judge to the Thursday night show and he agreed their complaint the film was obscene had merit and granted them the court's permission to seize the film footage. The theater manager and projectionist were arrested.

- Friday in Circuit Court, the theater owner blocked the village's attempts to stop further showing of "Miss Jones" by asking and getting the court to continue the hearing before another judge, one that had not seen the film.

- Saturday at the continued hearing, the owner's attorneys convinced the second judge he would prejudice a pending Federal Court case if he ruled on the movie or village's complaint and received a continuance to Monday.

- In the meantime, a second print of the movie was packing them in to three shows a night.

- Later in the day Saturday, attorneys for both sides got together and decided to call off all legal battles, if "Miss Jones" was taken off the screen after the Saturday night shows.

THE FILM, shown last week in defiance of Elk Grove Village's anti-obscenity ordinance, created problems for officials and owner but netted healthy box office receipts for theater owner Walter Panceo. He said the X-rated movie gave him the profit he needed now to be able to show family fare.

Panceo has decided to forego the second week run of the X-rated film and he and village officials today will ask for dismissal of charges and lawsuits pending against each other.

Panceo's attorney Patrick Tuile, yesterday said his client didn't want to continue what could be a long legal battle with the village.

The announcement came after Tuile Saturday had successfully argued for a continuance and blocked showing of "Miss Jones" in a 3rd District Circuit Court room.

Village officials had seized a print of the movie late Thursday and arrested theater manager David Boehm, 25, of 826 Sunnyside St., Roselle, and the projectionist, John MacKinnon, 23, of 6942 Birchwood St., Niles. A third warrant for Panceo's arrest was never served. He was out of town, according to his attorneys.

WHILE THE THEATER continued to show a second print of "Miss Jones" to packed houses through Saturday, attorneys for both sides argued the legality of the seizure and the propriety of the village's request that an Associate Circuit Court judge view the film in his chambers Saturday to decide if it was obscene.

Attorney Tuile pointed out that the theater owner was suing the officials for $250,000 in damages and that the Federal suit was scheduled for a Monday hearing. The damages were being asked by Panceo on the contention that village officials forced him to cancel a previously scheduled showing of "Miss Jones" and, realizing their threats were unconstitutional, passed an anti-obscenity ordinance.

"If you view this film today and make a judgment now you will be prejudicing the Monday hearing in the Federal Courts," said Tuile.

Assoc. Circuit Court Judge Francis W. Glowacki, who heard the village's plea to support their anti-obscenity ordinance, agreed with Tuile's contention there was no emergency.

THE MOVIE SCREEN set up in court was taken down and a projectionist hired by the village to put on the courtroom showing packed up his equipment and left.

"Miss Jones" wasn't screened for that matinee in Circuit Court but ran that evening in the Cinema Theater.

Village Pres. Charles Zettek said "we've proven our point and have taken the film out of the theater for at least half of the time it was scheduled to run. As far as I'm concerned, we have won and have provided that we are willing to back up violation of our anti-obscenity ordinance with court action."

"We are not censors and if we have to take such action again we will seek judicial remedy as we did this time," said Zettek.

Drawings for park center addition are authorized

The Elk Grove Park District board has authorized working drawings be drawn up for a 1,000-square-foot addition to the park district's administration center, but actual work on the project is not expected to get under way for several months.

The board had earlier approved preliminary plans for the $31,000 addition to the administration center at 499 Biesterfeld Rd., but wants to wait to start the project until the district's park improvement program is closer to completion.

Park district voters approved a $310,000 referendum for park additions and improvement last year. Board members, who approved construction of a recently completed new garage next to the administration center, now want to put emphasis on improving village parks, before making any additions to the administration center.

THE BOARD also gave approval to support the newly formed Northwest Special Recreation Assn., a cooperative effort of nine suburban park districts to provide recreation for handicapped youngsters.

The park district's share for one year in the program would be $3,700, according to Rich Ludovissy, superintendent of recreation.

Ludovissy noted that a six-week special program for youngsters with various handicaps cost the park district $2,500 last summer.

A full-time director for the association has been hired, according to Ludovissy, and is currently setting up a year-round program.

Programs will be offered at various park districts which are participating in the program. Ludovissy estimated there are about 110 youngsters in Elk Grove Village who could possibly participate in the special program.

High schools to allow student self-scheduling

Juniors and seniors in four of the five Dist. 211 high schools will choose their own class schedules and teachers next year.

The High Dist. 211 Board of Education Thursday authorized Palatine, Conant and Fremd high schools to use the student self-scheduling plan which was started this year at Schaumburg High School. Hoffman Estates High School will not adopt self-scheduling until the 1975-76 school year, when it will have its first senior class, district officials said.

Carl Welmer, Schaumburg principal and Tom Howard, associate principal, told the board that the self-scheduling, combined with a lengthening of the student lunch hour and elimination of home rooms has resulted in major reductions in the number of discipline problems at the school this year.

LAST SPRING juniors and seniors at Schaumburg registered for classes in much the same way college students do. They made up their own schedule and registered for specific class sections. They were able to select classes at certain times and taught by certain teachers.

Welmer and Howard presented statistics to the board indicating that the drop-out rate at Schaumburg is half what it was last year at this time, with only .9 per cent of the students dropping out in the first three months of the school year. In addition, the numbers of truancies, students tardy to class and students referred to the office for disturbing their classes has dropped when compared to last year.

Welmer said, "The student body has realized that this is a big chance for them to take responsibility and they've done it." He also said more students are taking five, instead of the minimum four subjects and that 600 of the 900 students who were involved in self-scheduling chose not to have a lunch period.

THE HIGH SCHOOL Dist. 211 board approved Thursday five new classes to be included in the curriculum next year.

The board approved a program of independent study in math for all five of the district's schools. The independent study program will be available for students who start algebra in the eighth grade and use up all other math courses of-

Moms come to rescue of first graders

Schools have their own 'fire team'

by BOB GALLAS

Long before the days of modern fire fighting equipment, bucket brigades were often used to put out fires. The bucket brigade in Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 has a different meaning these days, however.

Dist. 59's bucket brigade lights fires in the minds of many first graders whose flame may have otherwise gone out, due to special learning problems.

The brigade, in its first year at about six Dist. 59 schools, is made up of mothers who work with younger children, usually first graders, on a one-to-one level.

THE MOMS, under the guidance of a learning specialist, follow a carefully laid out program, based on each child's particular problem, which can range from failure to recognize a few letters of the alphabet to minor motor skill problems.

The name of the program comes from Michigan where the idea started. Moms carry special learning materials around in buckets.

"The biggest value of the program is that the children respond so beautifully to the one-to-one relationship, just knowing somebody cares and can pick out their problem," said Pat Poust, learning specialist at Forest View High School in Mount Prospect.

Each child meets with his bucket brigade mom two times per week for about 30 minutes. Each volunteer mom has two students and about 10 of the 30 minutes is spent with both children.

DURING THAT 10 minutes, the volunteers read aloud to both children, later giving them both a chance to talk about what was read.

Volunteer moms help correct minor learning problems in a variety of ways such as playing word games, showing various letters of the alphabet or reading. Others make special devices themselves, such as felt boards on which felt letters can be arranged differently or a small Christmas tree with letters and words made out of dough serving as ornaments.

The moms go through a workshop before beginning the program, which can last up to several months. As learning problems are corrected, the children are phased out of the program, going back into the classroom better prepared for learning.

The learning specialist keeps close watch on each child's progress through records kept by the volunteer, outlining a specific program to be followed. A meeting is held among the moms every four weeks to review each child's progress, while mapping out the next four weeks of the program.

"FOR MANY of the children, it's just a matter of catching up with the others," said Mrs. Poust. "A boy for example, may have been born in October instead of January, so he's almost a year younger than a lot of his classmates," she said.

Sometimes older children, such as fifth graders are brought into the program, working directly with the learning specialist and a younger child.

"The older might need some reinforcement in a certain area," said Mrs. Poust. "They get the reinforcement and their self-image is enhanced because they are helping out a younger child," she added.

Although alphabet recognition is the main emphasis of the bucket brigade program at Forest View, other areas are covered also, according to Mrs. Poust. Children are also helped in memory work, eye-motor coordination and other areas.

Meanwhile, the program has another main emphasis which is obviously working, according to Mrs. Poust. "We want to make education fun."

BUCKET BRIGADE HAS taken on an entirely different meaning in Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 as moms help children with minor learning problems in special one-on-one sessions.

95% of kids like schools: survey

Ninety-five per cent of the children attending Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 like their schools, according to the preliminary report of a recent survey.

Their parents apparently like the school district, too, the report indicates.

The survey was commissioned last year by the board of education's community relations committee and is to be received in its final form by April 1, Gordon Thoren, board member and committee chairman, said Friday.

It was set up through Northern Illinois University and aimed to get responses from one out of every five residents within the school district's boundaries.

THERE WERE 50 questions asked concerning the broad range of services the school district provides. A highlight of the responses from more than 2,000 parents with children in Dist. 54 schools shows:

• 95.8 per cent of the children like school and 99.2 per cent like it very much.

• Among parents, 21.8 per cent think discipline is too strict, 38 per cent think discipline is lenient and 17.2 per cent think it too lenient.

• 67.7 per cent of the parents believe the report card system for reporting student progress is satisfactory or better; while 24 per cent do not.

• Three-fourths of the parents favor assigning children to a specific grade level. 53 per cent of the parents surveyed expressed opposition to no regular grade level assignment; the remainder were closely split saying they either favor the practice or said they had no basis for an opinion.

• Three-fourths of the parents thought the space in schools is adequate and that teachers meet the academic, social and emotional needs of students.

• 54 per cent of the parents favor a district wide hot lunch program while 46 per cent do not.

At a recent school board meeting Donnie Rudd, school board president, took particular note of the survey reaction showing 65 per cent of the parents opposed elimination of book fees.

County school official backs bus safety drive

Richard J. Martwick, superintendent of the Cook County Educational Service Region, will support Schaumburg Township residents' request for stronger school bus safety legislation.

Martwick met recently with members of a Hanover Park citizens committee formed following the Dec. 20 death of Robyn Bradshaw, 5, a Link School kindergarten, accidentally killed after riding home on a school bus.

Martwick said it is the philosophy of his office to provide for safety in school buildings and transportation. He intends to testify soon before the Illinois School Problems Commission on the need "for a greater measure of safety."

"I am here tonight to find out what steps you feel should be taken and how to put more teeth into the law," he said. But Martwick noted "the real strength lies in enforcement."

PEYTON BRADSHAW, father of the victim, told of legislation proposed by the Illinois Jaycees. If adopted, it would require appointment of a regional safety director for school districts and adult supervisors to accompany bus drivers on all trips where pupils in grades kindergarten through sixth are carried.

"This would also require inclusion of specific safety standards in all contracts made between school districts and private transportation companies," Bradshaw added. He prefers the idea of school district owned and operated buses.

Martwick said his staff is working for legislation that will require all bus drivers to complete 20 hours of instruction before permits are issued.

A DRIVER-STUDENT safety instruction program now used in Cook County which involves an 18-minute film and 40 minutes of instruction was explained by Eugene Weir, Cook County director of pupil transportation.

"In all 90 Cook County districts where school transportation is used we have found there is poor communications between the students and the bus driver. The driver doesn't pay any attention to the children and the children don't care about the driver," said Weir.

He favors training that tells the students that the bus is to be considered their first class and the driver their first teacher.

Martwick has asked Bradshaw and his committee to formalize their request in writing and encouraged them to testify at the March 12 problems commission meeting.

by KAREN BLECHA

About 400 Chicago-area teachers greeted Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., with a standing ovation yesterday as he told them "the American people are being ripped off while the government stands by" in the fuel crisis.

"The oil companies have helped create the gas shortage," Stevenson said. "The profits rise higher and the lines grow longer. The people line up at the gas stations, they line up at the bank."

Signs carrying messages of "Dial Down Profits!" "America, the land of plenty — plenty of bull!" and "Kids need heat!" waved throughout the audience of mostly teachers at Maine East High School in Park Ridge.

Stevenson was invited to this "More Gas for Less" rally to talk about his Consumer Energy Act that calls for price rollbacks on gasoline and public reforms of the oil industry.

THE RALLY was sponsored by the Illinois Education Assn., the United Auto Workers and the Amalgamated Meatcutters. The three labor groups had invited congressmen from throughout the state, but only U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10, was there. Abner Mikva, candidate for the 10th District congressional seat, also attended to answer questions. Teachers continued to interrupt

Teachers hear Stevenson lay into oil profits, administration for 'indifference to public'

Stevenson with applause as he rapped the Nixon administration — "At times I am tempted to call the Nixon administration the Exxon administration" — for its unwillingness to fight for the consumer. He even predicted even higher gas prices for the rest of this year, saying they would probably rise 12 to 15 cents per gallon this year as they did in 1973.

"The President's program comes down to higher prices for the consumer," he said. "A policy of consumer gouging is a prescription for economic disaster. What's good for Exxon isn't always good for the country."

Stevenson urged the audience to make their support for his bill which Nixon has threatened to veto, known in Washington. He said he would personally deliver to the White House petitions with 10,000 signatures in support of oil industry reforms that had been gathered by the IEA.

STEVENSON SAID what the teachers wanted to hear: Young did not. In a question-and-answer period after the speech, Young said he would not support Stevenson's bill because it would be "counter-productive to the American free enterprise system," he said. His answer was met with boos and hisses from the audience, as were other of his answers to questions about the fuel shortage. Several times he was interrupted and the audience would not let him finish his answer.

"It's obvious you're not going to take time to listen to me," Young said. "You should get your facts straight (about the gas shortage) before making accusations."

Mikva said he would support Stevenson's bill if he is elected next November. "I am willing to slog it out with the oil industry," he said.

Teachers at the rally complained of cold classrooms and the higher cost of living because of the fuel shortage. Several said they did not know how to answer their students' questions about the gas crisis and who was to blame.

The rally was another attempt by the IEA to build nationwide support for price rollback legislation. Last month, the group demonstrated in front of the Standard Oil of Indiana building in Chicago to protest long lines at gas stations and high prices.

High schools to allow student self-scheduling ferred by the district by the time they are seniors.

A second semester will be added to the horticulture class offered at Conant High School starting next year, because of the board's action. The second semester class, district officials said, will allow students to study ornamental horticulture in addition to the landscape maintenance they study in the first semester course.

The board also approved having Schaumburg High School offer a second semester course in psychology as a pilot program to see if the course will be offered at other district schools. Associate Supt. Bruce Altergott said students are becoming increasingly interested in psychology.

The board also approved a cooperative program with Harper College in food service. Dist. 211 students will be bused to Harper three days a week for the semester-long course designed for juniors and seniors interested in careers in food service.

In addition, the board approved a full year course in early childhood education for students interested in working with children 3 to 5 years old. Students will work at the early childhood education center in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 and may also work with a similar program in Palatine Township Dist. 15.

THE DIST. 211 board approved a calendar for the 1974-75 school year which calls for school to open Thursday, Aug. 29 and to end Friday, June 13.

The calendar contains 185 days and agrees with the calendars which have been adopted by other area school districts.

Preschool center to open for handicapped

The Northwest Special Recreation Assn. will be offering a play center program for preschool mentally and physically handicapped children of the area.

The play center will be offered for a 10-week period March 18 through May 24. Participants must be 4 years of age.

A Tappan air conditioning dealer takes an unusual interest in your family tree.

If your house is shaded by a big tree, it'll figure into the estimate we work up for you.

Depending on where the tree is located in your yard as well as where it shades your house and when, it could mean you'll need less BTU's of cooling. And that'll cost you less.

Taking your family tree into consideration is just part of our estimate. Don't be surprised if we go through your attic, into your cellar, through the ductwork of your furnace, around all of your windows, and into asking personal questions. Like how often you bake cookies or entertain? And how many children you have to open and close doors?

Every Tappan estimate is different for different houses and variables, but, in one respect, they're the same — accurate! And that's because we're a Tappan dealer with a factory-approved checklist to work with.

If the installation is going to be right, the estimate has to be right. A wrong installation can run up your electric bill, and make you uncomfortable in more ways than one.

The other ways of estimating go on. Over the phone. Under the table. Overestimated. Underestimated. Some people even get estimates from friends who aren't even in the air conditioning business.

Who can you trust?

After reading this, you shouldn't have to guess.

The search goes on

Four years later, hunt for a suburban driver testing site continues; Barrington Hills location, despite complications, still top choice

by JULIA BAUER

Four years ago, Northwest suburban drivers thought they were about to get their own driver testing station and would no longer have to go 15 to 30 miles to state testing facilities.

Today, the Northwest suburban driver testing station is little closer to reality than it was in 1970.

The biggest single stumbling block to building the station has been a three-year search for a 40-acre site that suits state officials in both cost and location.

THE LATEST 'SITE' to catch the state's eye is land in Barrington Hills, near Ill. Rts. 59 and 72. Earlier sites considered and abandoned over the years were in Arlington Heights and unincorporated Palatine Township.

But now, the search for other locations is on again, at least on a small scale, according to Illinois Secretary of State spokesman, Norbert Johnson.

"The fact of the matter is we're looking for other sites with less impediments," Johnson said. He's been heading the investigation of the Barrington Hills site for nearly a year, and said yesterday that the search for an alternative location has not been successful.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, when contacted by The Herald Friday, said he would call Howlett today to check on the state's progress or possible lack of it. Schlickman was instrumental in getting legislation to fund the station two years ago.

PROBLEMS WITH THE Barrington Hills location were predicted last year by members of a three-man search committee appointed under former Secretary of State John Lewis, a Republican.

Search committee members submitted a list of recommended locations to newly-elected Democratic Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett in January, 1973, but the Barrington Hills location was not one of the sites on their list.

Why? Committee members said the site was not served by sewer or water lines from the Metropolitan Sanitary District and it did not meet the committee's accessibility requirement for the bulk of the traffic which would come from the southeast. In fact, the one big thing the site did have in its favor was a low purchase price, reported at $12,000 per acre.

The committee's top recommendations cost an average of $30,000 per acre, although those sites were already improved. Last summer, Johnson predicted that the state could extend improvements to the Barrington Hills location and still spend less than it would cost for the higher-priced sites.

STATE LEGISLATORS set aside $5.3 million two years ago to buy land and build the station, when it appeared that the testing station would go on a 40-acre site west of Palatine, on Quentin Road between Northwest Highway and Dundee Road.

Poor soil conditions and pressure from local currency exchanges caused the site to be dropped, according to state officials. That location is currently scheduled for a condominium apartment project.

The final purchase and construction of the Northwest suburban site is apparently not imminent. Johnson said he had no specific target date for finalizing the purchase.

In the meantime, Northwest suburban residents must still go to Libertyville or Elgin for their driving tests.

When it is built, the Northwest suburban station will have facilities for written and on-the-road testing of drivers.

High schools to allow student self-scheduling

Juniors and seniors in four of the five Dist. 211 high schools will choose their own class schedules and teachers next year.

The High Dist. 211 Board of Education Thursday authorized Palatine, Conant and Fremd high schools to use the student self-scheduling plan which was started this year at Schaumburg High School. Hoffman Estates High School will not adopt self-scheduling until the 1975-76 school year, when it will have its first senior class, district officials said.

Carl Weimer, Schaumburg principal and Tom Howard, associate principal, told the board that the self-scheduling, combined with a lengthening of the student lunch hour and elimination of home rooms has resulted in major reductions in the number of discipline problems at the school this year.

LAST SPRING juniors and seniors at Schaumburg registered for classes in much the same way college students do. They made up their own schedule and registered for specific class sections. They were able to select classes at certain times and taught by certain teachers.

Weimer and Howard presented statistics to the board indicating that the drop-out rate at Schaumburg is half what it was last year at this time, with only .9 per cent of the students dropping out in the first three months of the school year. In addition, the numbers of truancies, students tardy to class and students referred to the office for disturbing their classes has dropped when compared to last year.

Weimer said, "The student body has realized that this is a big chance for them to take responsibility and they've done it." He also said more students are taking five, instead of the minimum four subjects and that 600 of the 900 students who were involved in self-scheduling chose not to have a lunch period.

THE HIGH SCHOOL Dist. 211 board approved Thursday five new classes to be included in the curriculum next year.

The board approved a program of independent study in math for all five of the district's schools. The independent study program will be available for students who start algebra in the eighth grade and use up all other math courses offered by the district by the time they are seniors.

A second semester will be added to the horticulture class offered at Conant High School starting next year, because of the board's action. The second semester class, district officials said, will allow students to study ornamental horticulture in addition to the landscape maintenance they study in the first semester course.

The board also approved having Schaumburg High School offer a second semester course in psychology as a pilot program to see if the course will be offered at other district schools. Associate Supt. Bruce Altergott said students are becoming increasingly interested in psychology.

The board also approved a cooperative program with Harper College in food service. Dist. 211 students will be bused to Harper three days a week for the semester-long course designed for juniors and seniors interested in careers in food service.

In addition, the board approved a full year course in early childhood education for students interested in working with children 3 to 5 years old. Students will work at the early childhood education center in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 and may also work with a similar program in Palatine Township Dist. 15.

Summer water pressure woes expected again

The water pressure woes of residents in northwestern Palatine may be around for another summer.

Construction on the village's ninth water well has been at a standstill for more than two months while workers try to retrieve drilling machinery stuck approximately 650 feet in the ground.

The problem occurred in January when the Cook County Sheriff's Department ordered workers for J. P. Miller Artesian Well Co. to stop drilling the well on Sterling Avenue in the Countryside Apartment complex because of noise complaints. The workers stopped and the machinery has been stuck in the ground since.

The noise question has been resolved but now it is a matter of getting the machinery out to continue drilling, according to acting Village Mgr. James Bennett.

Work had been scheduled for completion by this summer to provide relief to the water pressure problems in the northwest area of Palatine but it is doubtful the well will be in operation by the summer because of the delays, said Bennett.

Suddenly it's spring

Police departments in Arlington Heights, Palatine and Rolling Meadows all reported a number of runaway dogs and minibike complaints over the weekend — a measure almost as valid as the thermometer in recording the unseasonably warm weather.

TEACHERS AT MAINE EAST High School in Park Ridge turned out yesterday to hear U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., talk about the gas shortage. Ste-

Stevenson, right center, is flanked on left by Nels Mikva, candidate for the 10th District congressional seat. Stevenson charged the oil firms are gouging the consumer.

by KAREN BLECHA

About 400 Chicago-area teachers greeted Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., with a standing ovation yesterday as he told them "the American people are being ripped off while the government stands by" in the fuel crisis.

"The oil companies have helped create the gas shortage," Stevenson said. "The profits rise higher and the lines grow longer. The people line up at the gas stations, they line up at the bank."

Signs carrying messages of "Dial Down Profits!" "America, the land of plenty — plenty of bull!" and "Kids need heat!" waved throughout the audience of mostly teachers at Maine East High School in Park Ridge.

Stevenson was invited to this "More Gas for Less" rally to talk about his Consumer Energy Act that calls for price rollbacks on gasoline and public reforms of the oil industry.

THE RALLY was sponsored by the Illinois Education Assn., the United Auto Workers and the Amalgamated Meatcutters. The three labor groups had invited congressmen from throughout the state, but only U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10, was there. Abner Mikva, candidate for the 10th District congressional seat, also attended to answer questions. Teachers continued to interrupt

Teachers hear Stevenson lay into oil profits, administration for 'indifference to public'

Stevenson with applause as he rapped the Nixon administration — "At times I am tempted to call the Nixon administration the Exxon administration" — for its unwillingness to fight for the consumer. He even predicted even higher gas prices for the rest of this year, saying they would probably rise 12 to 15 cents per gallon this year as they did in 1973.

"The President's program comes down to higher prices for the consumer," he said. "A policy of consumer gouging is a prescription for economic disaster. What's good for Exxon isn't always good for the country."

Stevenson urged the audience to make their support for his bill which Nixon has threatened to veto, known in Washington. He said he would personally deliver to the White House petitions with 10,000 signatures in support of oil industry reforms that had been gathered by the IEA.

STEVENSON SAID what the teachers wanted to hear: Young did not. In a question-and-answer period after the speech, Young said he would not support Stevenson's bill because it would be "counter-productive to the American free enterprise system," he said. His answer was met with boos and hisses from the audience, as were other of his answers to questions about the fuel shortage. Several times he was interrupted and the audience would not let him finish his answer.

"It's obvious you're not going to take time to listen to me," Young said. "You should get your facts straight (about the gas shortage) before making accusations."

Mikva said he would support Stevenson's bill if he is elected next November. "I am willing to slug it out with the oil industry," he said.

Teachers at the rally complained of cold classrooms and the higher cost of living because of the fuel shortage. Several said they did not know how to answer their students' questions about the gas crisis and who was to blame.

The rally was another attempt by the IEA to build nationwide support for price rollback legislation. Last month, the group demonstrated in front of the Standard Oil of Indiana building in Chicago to protest long lines at gas stations and high prices.

Doctors badger federal official on health price controls

by STEVE BROWN

They complained about the lid on rate increases. They badgered a federal official as to why they are one of the few segments of the economy still under price controls.

The scene was reminiscent of last month's demands raised by independent truckers, but instead of the scenario taking place at a truck stop, the grousers were gathered in the ballroom at the North Shore Hilton in Skokie.

About 50 doctors and hospital officials were there to listen to and question John Twinn, one of the government's chief architects for the price control on the health care industry.

TWINN, WHOSE breakfast meeting with the doctors was organized by U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10th, took a tough stand against the demands of medical men who clamored for a complete removal of controls on how much they could raise their rates.

The administrator of the health section of the U.S. Cost of Living Council, charged the health care industry was one of the most inflationary components of the economy before wage and price controls were instituted in 1971. He noted health care represents a $100 billion industry annually.

"Doctors fees were rising at least 50 per cent faster than the rest of the economy then," he said. He explained that the controls which now limit fee hikes to amount to 4 per cent annually appeared to be one of the few segments of the price stabilization issue which appeared to be working.

"I believe the medical profession should be commended for their efforts to help bring down the cost of living," Twinn said.

HOWEVER, THE kudos from Twinn were short lived as the doctors asked why the government had kept controls on them, while dropping controls on other segments of the economy.

They argued that the government should allow the controls to float free.

It was noted that not only have costs risen more than 4 per cent annually, but the actual treatment performed by doctors has become more comprehensive and more sophisticated in recent years.

Hospital officials also noted they were in a bind because they were unable to pass along increased cost from suppliers because of the price controls.

"We have to get the government out of the business of financing medical care," said Dr. George Lagorio. He noted that much of the inflationary problems were created as a direct result of the Medicare program.

"It used to be that we could not get a person over 65 into a hospital, now we cannot get them out," he added.

HOWEVER, TWINN indicated a fear of what would happen to doctors fees and hospital rates if controls were removed.

"The restraints we have seen would turn into a gold rush," he said, adding that the fees and rates would jump dramatically as doctors attempted to boost rates to the highest possible level anticipating tighter controls imposed by a national health insurance plan.

Twinn said he believed some type of flexible controls are needed for the period between the time price controls are ended, which could be as soon as the end of April, and the start of a national health insurance plan.

"The public has a Jeckell and Hyde view of the medical field, they want the best health care at all costs, until they get the bill, then they call for the clamps," he said.

BOTH TWINN and Young warned the medicine men they are vulnerable targets to some public officials.

"Many people believe that doctors and lawyers are overpaid," Young said. A spokesman for the American Medical Assn. said that "doctors are usually at the top of the income scale for all professional fields." He added that doctors earn an average of about $40,000 annually.

Despite the high incomes, doctors and hospital officials said continued controls could lead to strikes and the unionization of hospital employees.

RALPH HUTCHINS, administrator of the Skokie Valley Hospital, noted, "how can we be controlled and our suppliers not be controlled?" He also said that some hospitals have put off the purchase of new equipment because of the inability to pass along the costs because of controls.

"It could very well be possible that what you are seeing from the independent truckers this year could be repeated by doctors in three or four years," one doctor warned.

R. Ledinsky and Mrs. Tom Nelson, handicap chairmen; Mrs. Joseph Chase, tournament chairman; Mrs. Len Gieske, starter chairman; and Mrs. Gary Melton, and Mrs. Donald Biesecker, social chairmen.

Land purchase agreement set Palatine Park District commissioners reached an agreement last week to purchase for $6,500 six-tenths of an acre from Kurt Stier, whose property borders the Palatine Hills golf course, for part of the Palatine Trail.

Park officials have been negotiating with Stier for more than a year to get the land for the trail.

The route along Stier's property was chosen for safety reasons, to avoid having the trail parallel the golf course's 18th hole fairway, according to park director Fred P. Hall.

Construction of the remaining portion of the 4.7-mile Palatine Trail will begin this spring. The trail, for hiking and bicycling, was approved in a 1972 referendum.

Flooding slows traffic

Traffic was slowed on Northwest Highway last week when water from construction work by Illinois Bell Telephone Co. flooded the roadway east of Ill. Rte. 53.

The phone company was pumping water out of the compartments where telephone cables are kept when the problem occurred. The problem was expected to be corrected by today.

Commuter protests rush-hour 'squeeze play' at station by pair of trains

by KURT BAER

Hundreds of railroad commuters were caught in an uncomfortable squeeze play recently when two northwest-bound trains pulled into the Arlington Heights station at the same time.

The scheduling mixup caused no death or injury. But it was enough to unnerv at least one passenger, Jim Schrader of Buffalo Grove, who reported the incident to officials at the Chicago and North Western Ry. and asked for an investigation.

Schrader was a passenger on C&NW's No. 639 scheduled to arrive in Arlington Heights at 5:56 p.m. Last Thursday, as he and some 1,000 other commuters were getting off the train a second C&NW train pulled into the station, slowly slicing through the crowd of disembarking passengers and trapping some between the two sets of tracks.

"There was one little girl on the track who was grabbed away by a man who looked like he might have been attacking her, when actually he was probably saving her life," Schrader says.

R. A. DRENGLER, assistant division manager for the railroad and the man who investigated the incident, says the second train, followed to the letter the railroad's procedure in the case.

"The train made a complete stop before it reached the station and then proceeded at less than 5 m.p.h. We found nothing unsafe or irregular about it at all," Drenkler said.

The second train, which was sounding its horn and pulled in, may have been late or the first train may have been early. Drenkler could not be sure.

BUT ACCORDING to the railroad's timetable the twin arrival should not have occurred. The next train after the 639 is the 641 and it is not scheduled to arrive until 6:13. The train before the 639 is supposed to be in Arlington Heights at 5:49 p.m.

Drenkler says it is not an uncommon occurrence among the railroad's 200 daily trains and 60 suburban stations for one train to arrive before another has left.

"Our rules require that the train proceed through the station area with extreme caution, and that is what the engineer did in this instance," he said.

COMMUTERS sometimes have to scurry across the tracks when two Chicago and North Western Ry. trains arrive at almost the same time.

Library service poll to determine needs

Questionnaires on library service will be mailed next week to homeowners' associations in unincorporated Palatine Township by a recently formed Palatine Township library study committee.

The questionnaires are an attempt to acquire feedback on possible ways of extending library service to families who do not live in existing library's boundaries, according to committee member Melvin T. Vincent.

Inverness, Winston Knolls subdivision of Hoffman Estates, and unincorporated areas of Palatine Township fall outside the boundaries of existing libraries. Residents of those areas may currently pay non-resident fees to participate in the local libraries. Township residents pay a $30 annual fee for use of the library.

Primary options for residents without library service include continuation of the non-resident fees, trying to annex to a library district if either Palatine Village Library or Schaumburg Township Library eventually becomes a district, or contracting with such libraries for services.

The committee, which was formed by township auditor Charles Zimmerman, includes Jill Piazza, Rhemah Lange, Mrs. Daniel Lemanski, Mrs. Andrew Koller, Bennett Atwater, Jean and Vincent Owen.

Driver test site search still on; Barrington Hills?

by JULIA BAUER

Four years ago, Northwest suburban drivers thought they were about to get their own driver testing station and would no longer have to go 15 to 30 miles to state testing facilities.

Today, the Northwest suburban driver testing station is little closer to reality than it was in 1970.

The biggest single stumbling block to building the station has been a three-year search for a 40-acre site that suits state officials in both cost and location.

THE LATEST SITE to catch the state's eye is land in Barrington Hills, near Ill. Rts. 50 and 72. Earlier sites considered and abandoned over the years were in Arlington Heights and unincorporated Palatine Township.

But now, the search for other locations is on again, at least on a small scale, according to Illinois Secretary of State spokesman, Norbert Johnson.

"The fact of the matter is we're looking for other sites with less impediments," Johnson said. He's been heading the investigation of the Barrington Hills site for nearly a year, and said yesterday that the search for an alternative location has not been successful.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, when contacted by The Herald Friday, said he would call Howlett today to check on the state's progress or possible lack of it. Schlickman was instrumental in getting legislation to fund the station two years ago.

PROBLEMS WITH THE Barrington Hills location were predicted last year by members of a three-man search committee appointed under former Secretary of State John Lewis, a Republican.

Search committee members submitted a list of recommended locations to newly-elected Democratic Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett in January, 1973, but the Barrington Hills location was not one of the sites on their list.

Why? Committee members said the site was not served by sewer or water lines from the Metropolitan Sanitary District and it did not meet the committee's accessibility requirement for the bulk of the traffic which would come from the southeast. In fact, the one big thing the site did have in its favor was a low purchase price, reported at $12,000 per acre.

The committee's top recommendations cost an average of $30,000 per acre, although those sites were already improved. Last summer, Johnson predicted that the state could extend improvements to the Barrington Hills location and still spend less than it would cost for the higher-priced sites.

STATE LEGISLATORS set aside $5.3 million two years ago to buy land and build the station, when it appeared that the testing station would go on a 40-acre site west of Palatine, on Quentin Road between Northwest Highway and Dundee Road.

Poor soil conditions and pressure from local currency exchanges caused the site to be dropped, according to state officials. That location is currently scheduled for a condominium apartment project.

The final purchase and construction of the Northwest suburban site is apparently not imminent. Johnson said he had no specific target date for finalizing the purchase.

In the meantime, Northwest suburban residents must still go to Libertyville or Elgin for their driving tests.

When it is built, the Northwest suburban station will have facilities for written and on-the-road testing of drivers.

TEACHERS AT MAINE EAST High School in Park Ridge turned out yesterday to hear U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., talk about the gas shortage. Stavenson, right center, is flanked on left by Nels Mikva, candidate for the 10th District congressional seat. Stevenson charged the oil firms are gouging the consumer.

by KAREN BLECHA

About 400 Chicago-area teachers greeted Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., with a standing ovation yesterday as he told them "the American people are being ripped off while the government stands by" in the fuel crisis.

"The oil companies have helped create the gas shortage," Stevenson said. "The profits rise higher and the lines grow longer. The people line up at the gas stations, they line up at the bank."

Signs carrying messages of "Dial Down Profits!" "America, the land of plenty — plenty of bull!" and "Kids need heat!" waved throughout the audience of mostly teachers at Maine East High School in Park Ridge.

Stevenson was invited to this "More Gas for Less" rally to talk about his Consumer Energy Act that calls for price rollbacks on gasoline and public reforms of the oil industry.

THE RALLY was sponsored by the Illinois Education Assn., the United Auto Workers and the Amalgamated Meatcutters. The three labor groups had invited congressmen from throughout the state, but only U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10, was there. Abner Mikva, candidate for the 10th District congressional seat, also attended to answer questions. Teachers continued to interrupt

Stevenson with applause as he rapped the Nixon administration — "At times I am tempted to call the Nixon administration the Exxon administration" — for its unwillingness to fight for the consumer. He even predicted even higher gas prices for the rest of this year, saying they would probably rise 12 to 15 cents per gallon this year as they did in 1973.

"The President's program comes down to higher prices for the consumer," he said. "A policy of consumer gouging is a prescription for economic disaster. What's good for Exxon isn't always good for the country."

Stevenson urged the audience to make their support for his bill which Nixon has threatened to veto, known in Washington. He said he would personally deliver to the White House petitions with 10,000 signatures in support of oil industry reforms that had been gathered by the IEA.

STEVENSON SAID what the teachers wanted to hear: Young did not. In a question-and-answer period after the speech, Young said he would not support Stevenson's bill because it would be "counter-productive to the American free enterprise system," he said. His answer was met with boos and hisses from the audience, as were other of his answers to questions about the fuel shortage. Several times he was interrupted and the audience would not let him finish his answer.

"It's obvious you're not going to take time to listen to me," Young said. "You should get your facts straight (about the gas shortage) before making accusations."

Mikva said he would support Stevenson's bill if he is elected next November. "I am willing to slug it out with the oil industry," he said.

Teachers at the rally complained of cold classrooms and the higher cost of living because of the fuel shortage. Several said they did not know how to answer their students' questions about the gas crisis and who was to blame.

The rally was another attempt by the IEA to build nation-wide support for price rollback legislation. Last month, the group demonstrated in front of the Standard Oil of Indiana building in Chicago to protest long lines at gas stations and high prices.

Suddenly it's spring

Police departments in Arlington Heights, Palatine and Rolling Meadows all reported a number of runaway dogs and minibike complaints over the weekend — a measure almost as valid as the thermometer in recording the unseasonably warm weather.

Doctors badger federal official on health price controls

by STEVE BROWN

They complained about the lid on rate increases. They badgered a federal official as to why they are one of the few segments of the economy still under price controls.

The scene was reminiscent of last month's demands raised by independent truckers, but instead of the scenario taking place at a truck stop, the grouse were gathered in the ballroom at the North Shore Hilton in Skokie.

About 50 doctors and hospital officials were there to listen to and question John Twinn, one of the government's chief architects for the price control on the health care industry.

TWINN, WHOSE breakfast meeting with the doctors was organized by U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-Ill., took a tough stand against the demands of medical men who clamored for a complete removal of controls on how much they could raise their rates.

The administrator of the health section of the U.S. Cost of Living Council, charged the health care industry was one of the most inflationary components of the economy before wage and price controls were instituted in 1971. He noted health care represents a $100 billion industry annually.

"Doctors fees were rising at least 50 per cent faster than the rest of the economy then," he said. He explained that the controls which now limit fee hikes to amount to 4 per cent annually appeared to be one of the few segments of the price stabilization issue which appeared to be working.

"I believe the medical profession should be commended for their efforts to help bring down the cost of living," Twinn said.

HOWEVER, THE kudos from Twinn were short lived as the doctors asked why the government had kept controls on them, while dropping controls on other segments of the economy.

They argued that the government should allow the controls to float free.

It was noted that not only have costs risen more than 4 per cent annually, but the actual treatment performed by doctors has become more comprehensive and more sophisticated in recent years.

Hospital officials also noted they were in a bind because they were unable to pass along increased cost from suppliers because of the price controls.

"We have to get the government out of the business of financing medical care," said Dr. George Lagorio. He noted that much of the inflationary problems were created as a direct result of the Medicare program.

"It used to be that we could not get a person over 65 into a hospital, now we cannot get them out," he added.

HOWEVER, TWINN indicated a fear of what would happen to doctors fees and hospital rates if controls were removed.

"The restraints we have seen would turn into a gold rush," he said, adding that the fees and rates would jump dramatically as doctors attempted to boost rates to the highest possible level anticipating tighter controls imposed by a national health insurance plan.

Twinn said he believed some type of flexible controls are needed for the period between the time price controls are ended, which could be as soon as the end of April, and the start of a national health insurance plan.

"The public has a Jeckell and Hyde view of the medical field, they want the best health care at all costs, until they get the bill, then they call for the clamps," he said.

BOTH TWINN and Young warned the medicine men they are vulnerable targets to some public officials.

"Many people believe that doctors and lawyers are overpaid," Young said. A spokesman for the American Medical Assn. said that "doctors are usually at the top of the income scale for all professional fields." He added that doctors earn an average of about $40,000 annually.

Despite the high incomes, doctors and hospital officials said continued controls could lead to strikes and the unionization of hospital employees.

RALPH HUTCHINS, administrator of the Skokie Valley Hospital, noted, "how can we be controlled and our suppliers not be controlled?" He also said that some hospitals have put off the purchase of new equipment because of the inability to pass along the costs because of controls.

"It could very well be possible that what you are seeing from the independent truckers this year could be repeated by doctors in three or four years," one doctor warned.

Three $1,000 grants available

City scholarship forms ready soon?

Applications for city-sponsored scholarships may be available to Rolling Meadows high school seniors by March 15.

The date has been tentatively set as the time when application forms for the first city-sponsored scholarships may be ready. The forms would be distributed to the four high schools serving the city. Students completing the forms will vie for three $1,000 scholarships the city has tentatively planned on awarding for the coming scholastic year.

City Mgr. James Watson met Friday with representatives from Rolling Meadows, Fremd, St. Viator and Sacred Heart of Mary high schools to discuss further details of the planned city scholarships. Another meeting has been set for Wednesday morning to complete plans.

CRITERIA FOR applying for the scholarships have yet to be finalized, but will apparently include that students be residents of the city for two years and that they or their parents maintain a residence in the city for the time that the four-year scholarship is awarded.

Financial need will not be a factor in determining recipients, city officials have said.

City Administrative Assistant Charles Green has been selected to head a five-man panel which will judge applicants. Others on the panel will include representatives from each of the four high schools serving the city.

Green said officials will attempt to select winners in time to be announced at the first city council meeting in May.

Money for the scholarship program was set aside by the city council last year. Officials have said the program is aimed at helping middle class families who cannot meet the rising costs of higher education but who are being passed over for financial aid in favor of low-income families.

Women's golf signup soon

Women golfers in the Buehler YMCA league will sign up March 11 at 9:30 a.m. during a morning coffee at the Y, Northwest Highway and Baldwin Road.

People interested in joining the league also will get a tour of the YMCA's women's fitness center. Leagues will play at Thunderbird Country Club on Monday mornings at 8:30 a.m. from May 6 to Aug. 26.

Fees are $4 for YMCA members and $9 for nonmembers. The league's annual potluck supper will be April 1 at 11 a.m. at the Thunderbird Country Club.

2nd parent, child workshop today

A second workshop on improving parent-child relationships will be held at 7:30 p.m. today in the Paddock School cafeteria, 225 W. Washington Ct., Palatine.

The workshop, supported by Title I funds, is being held because parents were so enthusiastic about the first workshop held earlier this school year, said Ginny Toik, Palatine Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Department Chairman, Title I.

Future meetings are being planned for the first Monday of every month, she added. Speaking at all the meetings will be Marcie Schwabenbauer, a social worker in Wheaton School Dist. 200. All parents are invited to attend, Miss Toik said.

Commuter protests rush-hour 'squeeze play' at station by pair of trains

by KURT BAER

Hundreds of railroad commuters were caught in an uncomfortable squeeze play recently when two northwest-bound trains pulled into the Arlington Heights station at the same time.

The scheduling mixup caused no death or injury. But it was enough to unnerv at least one passenger, Jim Schrader of Buffalo Grove, who reported the incident to officials at the Chicago and North Western Ry. and asked for an investigation.

Schrader was a passenger on C&N's No. 639 scheduled to arrive in Arlington Heights at 5:56 p.m. Last Thursday, as he and some 1,000 other commuters were getting off the train a second C&N train pulled into the station, slowly slicing through the crowd of disembarking passengers and trapping some between the two sets of tracks.

"There was one little girl on the track who was grabbed away by a man who looked like he might have been attacking her, when actually he was probably saving her life," Schrader says.

R. A. DRENGLER, assistant division manager for the railroad and the man who investigated the incident, says the second train, followed to the letter the railroad's procedure in the case.

"The train made a complete stop before it reached the station and then proceeded at less than 5 m.p.h. We found nothing unsafe or irregular about it at all," Drengler said.

The second train, which was sounding its horn and pulled in, may have been late or the first train may have been early. Drengler could not be sure.

BUT ACCORDING to the railroad's timetable the twin arrival should not have occurred. The next train after the 639 is the 641 and it is not scheduled to arrive until 6:13. The train before the 639 is supposed to be in Arlington Heights at 5:49 p.m.

Drengler says it is not an uncommon occurrence among the railroad's 200 daily trains and 60 suburban stations for one train to arrive before another has left.

"Our rules require that the train proceed through the station area with extreme caution, and that is what the engineer did in this instance," he said.

COMMUTERS sometimes have to scurry across the tracks when two Chicago and North Western Ry. trains arrive at almost the same time.

Flooding slows traffic

Traffic was slowed on Northwest Highway last week when water from construction work by Illinois Bell Telephone Co. flooded the roadway east of Ill. Rte. 53.

The phone company was pumping water out of the compartments where telephone cables are kept when the problem occurred. The problem was expected to be corrected by today.

'Friends of Heart' drive tops $10,000

The "Friends of the Heart" fund drive of Sacred Heart of Mary High School in Rolling Meadows have netted more than $10,000 for the general school fund.

The $10,000 includes donations to the school and proceeds from a Feb. 14 benefit dinner. Benefit chairman Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Lamich and Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Brady termed the Valentine's Day dinner a "success," pointing out that the proceeds exceed last year's earnings by more than $1,000.

Anyone wishing to make a contribution to the "Friends of the Heart" fund may do so by contacting the school at 392-6880.

Library service poll to determine needs

Questionnaires on library service will be mailed next week to homeowners' associations in unincorporated Palatine Township by a recently formed Palatine Township library study committee.

The questionnaires are an attempt to acquire feedback on possible ways of extending library service to families who do not live in existing library's boundaries, according to committee member Melvin T. Vincent.

Inverness, Winston Knolls subdivision of Hoffman Estates, and unincorporated areas of Palatine Township fall outside the boundaries of existing libraries. Residents of those areas may currently pay non-resident fees to participate in the local libraries. Township residents pay a $30 annual fee for use of the library.

Primary options for residents without library service include continuation of the non-resident fees, trying to annex to a library district if either Palatine Village Library or Schaumburg Township Library eventually becomes a district, or contracting with such libraries for services.

The committee, which was formed by township auditor Charles Zimmerman, includes Jill Piazza, Rhemah Lange, Mrs. Daniel Lemanski, Mrs. Andrew Koller, Bennett Atwater, Jean and Vincent Owen.

Pleasant spring weather had suburban girls kicking up their heels during the weekend.

Dial-a-bus service plan offered by STC

Schaumburg Dial-A-Bus service could soon become a reality.

Walter Fiene, owner and operator of the 20-year-old Schaumburg Transportation Co., has submitted a dial-a-bus proposal to the village but, since he is competing with several other companies, he isn't certain he will get the business. STC specializes in school bus service.

"I would plan to purchase three minibuses and equip them with two-way radios for Monday through Friday service on call and probably on Saturdays with shorter hours," Fiene said.

He declined to discuss financial details of his proposal since the village has not yet made a decision.

RECENTLY MAYOR Robert O. Atcher asked the village mass transportation committee to investigate the possibility of establishing local bus service.

Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates Jaycees have agreed to help the mass transportation committee, headed by Fred Dietrich, conduct an attitude and potential usership survey.

But Fiene says he has been considering expanding whether or not he gets the village contract, though no decision has been made yet.

"Before I can do anything, problems with The Milwaukee Road station in Roselle will have to be resolved. The parking area there is so congested that my buses have no place to stand and wait for passengers," Fiene explained.

HE HAS TWO morning commuter runs to Roselle and three evening return buses operating. Fiene said he doubts whether he would seriously consider a run to the Chicago and North Western Ry. station in Palatine because he believes "the bulk of residents use trains out of Roselle."

Before definitely committing to expansion, Fiene says he needs a "guaranteed source of revenue." He feels this could be achieved by working with real estate developers interested in establishing trial bus service to new developments.

A college commuter bus service from Schaumburg to Elgin to DeKalb, started Feb. 13 by Dale Nygaard, of Streamwood, appears to be enjoying moderate success.

Nygaard says an average of 28 to 35 riders per night paying the $1.25 round trip fare bring the service to the break-even point.

"Last Monday we got the minimum required and made a little extra but Tuesday we were down a bit. The take from the day before made the difference," said Nygaard. He said Wednesdays are "good" with an average of 31 people while Thursdays are "down."

"We are finding that riders are willing to pay an increase in the Thursday night fare to keep the bus going," he said.

Nygaard said riders are talking of making the service permanent and plan to have a meeting soon to discuss the possibility.

BUT NYGAARD, now in his last semester at Northern Illinois University, isn't sure that the project would be financially feasible.

He said the group intends to take a "wait and see" attitude until after the March 19 Regional Transit Authority vote. Then, if the issue is approved, they will "check into federal and state money."

"We are a bunch of college kids; we have open minds but no money," Nygaard said.

Pinger Park may be named — like other parks — for tree

by PAT GERLACH

In their search for ideas for renaming a local park, Hoffman Estates Park District officials are scanning the forest.

Consideration of renaming Pinger Park, at Lakeview Lane and Washington Boulevard, is expected at tomorrow night's park board meeting, said Al Binder, director of parks and recreation.

The park was originally called Lakeview Park but former park officials renamed the facility in 1967 for Edward Pinger, first mayor of Hoffman Estates.

Pinger, now a resident of suburban Seattle, Wash., was convicted last December on federal charges of conspiracy, bribery and tax evasion and is currently serving a two-year federal prison term.

Five other former village officials were convicted on similar charges.

CHARGES AGAINST Pinger and the others stem from alleged payoffs to village officials in return for favorable zoning.

Pinger was a member of the village planning and zoning commission when Kaufman and Broad obtained zoning permitting the construction of Barrington Square.

Park commissioners agreed in November to examine existing policy regarding the naming of parks when Comr. Tom Barber suggested abandoning the idea of naming local parks for people.

Binder predicted the park board will follow policy and select the name of a tree for the facility.

The matter has been studied in committee and Binder said he is hopeful that a new name will be selected this week.

DURING THE past year five parks in the 25-park system have been given the names of trees. Those facilities include: Sycamore Park near Hillcrest School; Maple Park near Blackhawk School; Birch Park near Twinbrook School; Cottonwood Park adjacent to Hassell Road; and Willow Park in Winston Knolls.

County education chief, parents meet

Stiff bus safety bill gains backing

Richard J. Martwick, superintendent of the Cook County Educational service region, will support Schaumburg Township residents' request for stronger school bus safety legislation.

Martwick met recently with members of a Hanover Park citizens committee formed following the Dec. 20 death of Robyn Bradshaw, 5, a Link School kindergarten, accidentally killed after riding home on a school bus.

Martwick said it is the philosophy of his office to provide for safety in school buildings and transportation. He intends to testify soon before the Illinois School Problems Commission on the need "for a greater measure of safety."

"I am here tonight to find out what steps you feel should be taken and how to put more teeth into the law," he said. But Martwick noted "the real strength lies in enforcement."

PEYTON BRADSHAW, father of the victim, told of legislation proposed by the Illinois Jaycees. If adopted, it would require appointment of a regional safety director for school districts and adult supervisors to accompany bus drivers on all trips where pupils in grades kindergarten through sixth are carried.

"This would also require inclusion of specific safety standards in all contracts made between school districts and private transportation companies," Bradshaw added. He prefers the idea of school district owned and operated buses.

Martwick said his staff is working for legislation that will require all bus drivers to complete 20 hours of instruction before permits are issued.

A DRIVER-STUDENT safety instruction program now used in Cook County which involves an 18-minute film and 40 minutes of instruction was explained by Eugene Weir, Cook County director of pupil transportation.

"In all 90 Cook County districts where school transportation is used we have found there is poor communications between the students and the bus driver. The driver doesn't pay any attention to the children and the children don't care about the driver," said Weir.

He favors training that tells the students that the bus is to be considered their first class and the driver their first teacher.

Martwick has asked Bradshaw and his committee to formalize their request in writing and encouraged them to testify at the March 12 problems commission meeting.

Answer-phone for village hall

Telephones at the Hoffman Estates Municipal Building should never "ring off the hook" after April 1. But persons calling the village hall will sometimes find themselves talking to a tape recorder.

The village board recently approved purchase of an Ansa-Phone, which will answer the phone when the switchboard is busy during the working day or when personnel have gone home for the night. It will tape record messages from callers, or sometimes play a taped message to callers. If the switchboard operator is busy, it will ask the caller to hold on. If water service is interrupted, it will tell the caller why. If the village hall is closed, it will tell the caller when to call again.

The system will cost $450, and will be supplied by Automatic Answering Service Systems Co., Chicago. The price includes the machine itself, a cartridge to accept messages and another one to play taped announcements on local emergencies and a year's service contract to start after the 90-day warranty expires.

Minibikes: energy crisis answer?

A miniplan was put to the Hoffman Estates Village Board recently for what four local teenagers believe might help diminish the energy crisis.

Cindy Hart, 14, of 369 Carlton Rd., Hoffman Estates, was spokesman for the group in asking the board to allow use of minibikes on local streets.

"We wish to help in the energy crisis," said Miss Hart, noting parents of village teenagers must drive them to many activities, because distances are too far to walk. Minibikes use less gas than cars, the teens pointed out. The teenagers suggested the board allow the minibikes for a 90-day trial.

The matter was referred to Police Chief John O'Connell, who has not yet had time to research the question. O'Connell said yesterday he doubts the village can comply, since the Illinois secretary of state will not license the vehicles. Anything which the state will not license is illegal, said O'Connell.

The chief also said he does not personally favor mixing minibikes with auto traffic. It would result in traffic problems, and a hazard to the general motoring public, he said.

The search goes on

Four years later, hunt for a suburban driver testing site continues; Barrington Hills location, despite complications, still top choice

by JULIA BAUER

Four years ago, Northwest suburban drivers thought they were about to get their own driver testing station and would no longer have to go 15 to 30 miles to state testing facilities.

Today, the Northwest suburban driver testing station is little closer to reality than it was in 1970.

The biggest single stumbling block to building the station has been a three-year search for a 40-acre site that suits state officials in both cost and location.

THE LATEST SITE to catch the state's eye is land in Barrington Hills, near Ill. Rts. 59 and 72. Earlier sites considered and abandoned over the years were in Arlington Heights and unincorporated Palatine Township.

But now, the search for other locations is on again, at least on a small scale, according to Illinois Secretary of State spokesman, Norbert Johnson.

"The fact of the matter is we're looking for other sites with less impediments," Johnson said. He's been heading the investigation of the Barrington Hills site for nearly a year, and said yesterday that the search for an alternative location has not been successful.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, when contacted by The Herald Friday, said he would call Howlett today to check on the state's progress or possible lack of it. Schlickman was instrumental in getting legislation to fund the station two years ago.

PROBLEMS WITH THE Barrington Hills location were predicted last year by members of a three-man search committee appointed under former Secretary of State John Lewis, a Republican.

Search committee members submitted a list of recommended locations to newly-elected Democratic Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett in January, 1973, but the Barrington Hills location was not one of the sites on their list.

Why? Committee members said the site was not served by sewer or water lines from the Metropolitan Sanitary District and it did not meet the committee's accessibility requirement for the bulk of the traffic which would come from the southeast. In fact, the one big thing the site did have in its favor was a low purchase price, reported at $12,000 per acre.

The committee's top recommendations cost an average of $30,000 per acre, although those sites were already improved. Last summer, Johnson predicted that the state could extend improvements to the Barrington Hills location and still spend less than it would cost for the higher-priced sites.

STATE LEGISLATORS set aside $5.3 million two years ago to buy land and build the station, when it appeared that the testing station would go on a 40-acre site west of Palatine, on Quentin Road between Northwest Highway and Dundee Road.

Poor soil conditions and pressure from local currency exchanges caused the site to be dropped, according to state officials. That location is currently scheduled for a condominium apartment project.

The final purchase and construction of the Northwest suburban site is apparently not imminent. Johnson said he had no specific target date for finalizing the purchase.

In the meantime, Northwest suburban residents must still go to Libertyville or Elgin for their driving tests.

When it is built, the Northwest suburban station will have facilities for written and on-the-road testing of drivers.

Schaumburg OKs joining transit body

Membership in the Northwest Suburban Mass Transit District was approved by Schaumburg trustees this week.

The village has applied for membership in the transit district because of increased interest in planning for the regional transportation center in the southern end of town near The Milwaukee Road Ry. west suburban commuter line and Schaumburg Airport.

Mayor Robert O. Atcher announced plans to ask the mass transportation committee, chaired by Fred Dietrich, to appoint one of its members as representative to the transit district board.

Trustee Ray McArthur, who serves as village board liaison to the mass transportation committee, reported progress in the consideration of a local bus system.

McArthur said the committee has had meetings with several transportation companies to determine costs and operating procedures for local service.

He also noted that Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates Jaycees chapters have expressed willingness to help the committee in a survey of mass transportation attitudes and needs.

"We feel that soon the committee will be in a position to make a direct recommendation to the village board concerning bus transportation," McArthur said.

Rummage sale to aid area

Proceeds from a March 30 and 31 rummage sale being planned by Youth for Civic Action will be used for community projects.

The sale will be held from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. both days at Vogelei Recreation Center, 650 W. Higgins Rd., Hoffman Estates.

The youth group, whose membership is open to all high school age students in the area, is urging residents to hold on to items they may wish to donate for sale. Plans are being made to pick up merchandise with arrangements to be announced later.

Youth for Civic Action, sponsored by Hoffman Estates Park District, is planning to paint all park warming houses as its first official activity. The project will be done in April.

School promotion week set

School promotion week will be held March 10 through 15 at St. Peter Lutheran School, 208 E. Schaumburg Rd., Schaumburg.

Activities will begin with March 10 worship services placing special emphasis on Christian education. The Rev. William Ameiss, youth executive of the Northern Illinois District of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, will speak at 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m. services.

Open house will be held at the school from 8:30 a.m. to 3:25 p.m. March 11 and members of the community as well as parents of students are invited to visit classrooms. Visitors will be encouraged to spend as much time in the school as they desire.

Spring concert March 15

St. Peter's music department will hold its annual spring concert March 15 at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium when the four school choirs and band will present various sacred and secular songs.

The school band will present special musical selections at 2:30 p.m. in the school auditorium and a slide presentation on Lutheran schools in Illinois will be shown during the entire day.

A 50 cent charge will be asked of adults; proceeds will be used to help pay for music program materials.

Religious couples program

An afternoon of recollection and prayer for married couples will be held March 10, by the St. Marcelline Adult Religious Education Program.

The program will focus on oneself, communication, reflection on the relationship and spirituality of the sacrament. Celebration of the Eucharist will also be held.

Moderators for the program are Rev. James Friedel and Mr. and Mrs. D. Killips of the Chicago Marriage Encounter Group.

The program will be from 2 to 6 p.m. at the church, 820 S. Springguth Rd., Schaumburg.

Admission is $3 per couple. The public is invited.

Conant choir to compete

The Conant High School Concert Choir has been chosen for competition in the first annual Six Flags over Mid-America Choral Festival in St. Louis, Mo., in April.

The choir will work on fund-raising projects in March to finance the trip. The festival is open only to winners of the superior rating in state contests last spring. These choirs from throughout the Midwest will compete for trophies, certificates and ratings. Conant students will compete in the senior high mixed chorus classification. The festival will include a two-day pass to Six Flags over Mid-America amusement park.

The choir is now selling candy and donuts at the school to raise money for the trip and will conduct a community-wide newspaper drive with the help of the Conant Booster Club on March 16.

Conant's next choral concert is Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Hoffman Estates High School auditorium. Admission will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for children. Proceeds will also be used for the trip.

High schools OK self-scheduling plan

Juniors and seniors in four of the five Dist. 211 high schools will choose their own class schedules and teachers next year.

The High Dist. 211 Board of Education Thursday authorized Palatine, Conant and Fremd high schools to use the student self-scheduling plan which was started this year at Schaumburg High School. Hoffman Estates High School will not adopt self-scheduling until the 1975-76 school year, when it will have its first senior class, district officials said.

Carl Weimer, Schaumburg principal and Tom Howard, associate principal, told the board that the self-scheduling, combined with a lengthening of the student lunch hour and elimination of home rooms has resulted in major reductions in the number of discipline problems at the school this year.

LAST SPRING juniors and seniors at Schaumburg registered for classes in much the same way college students do. They made up their own schedule and registered for specific class sections. They were able to select classes at certain times and taught by certain teachers.

New Great Hall use rules go into effect April 1

Revised policy governing the use of Schaumburg's Great Hall, 231 S. Civic Dr., will go into effect April 1.

Village officials believe the Great Hall, a facility purchased and maintained by the village, should be restricted for use by Schaumburg residents.

Therefore, all village boards, commissions and committees will have unrestricted, first-priority use of the building.

All organizations comprised completely of Schaumburg residents, or groups that benefit Schaumburg only will be restricted to use of the Great Hall once a month on a regular basis.

These groups include homeowners associations, Jaycees, Jaycettes, Schaumburg Woman's Club, G Greater Schaumburg Assn. of Commerce and Industry among others.

USE OF THE building by these organizations must be scheduled at least 30 days but not more than 90 days in advance, but officials emphasize that specially called village meetings will take priority.

Village officials believe the Great Hall can be more effectively used for adult-type service clubs and have limited youth-oriented organizations, to twice yearly use of the building.

They point out also that while Schaumburg Festival Theatre is comprised in part of persons not living in the village, special consideration is warranted because of considerable expenses incurred by the drama group in installing proper lighting. On a temporary basis, their continued use of the Great Hall will be permitted.

But political or profit-making groups or their affiliates will not be allowed to use the Great Hall.

A standard fee of $1.50 per hour, to Weimer and Howard presented statistics to the board indicating that the drop-out rate at Schaumburg is half what it was last year at this time, with only .9 per cent of the students dropping out in the first three months of the school year. In addition, the numbers of truancies, students tardy to class and students referred to the office for disturbing their classes has dropped when compared to last year.

Weimer said, "The student body has realized that this is a big chance for them to take responsibility and they've done it." He also said more students are taking five, instead of the minimum four subjects and that 600 of the 900 students who were involved in self-scheduling chose not to have a lunch period.

THE HIGH SCHOOL Dist. 211 board approved Thursday five new classes to be included in the curriculum next year.

The board approved a program of independent study in math for all five of the district's schools. The independent study program will be available for students who start algebra in the eighth grade and use up all other math courses offered by the district by the time they are seniors.

A second semester will be added to the horticulture class offered at Conant High School starting next year, because of the board's action. The second semester class, district officials said, will allow students to study ornamental horticulture in addition to the landscape maintenance they study in the first semester course.

The board also approved having Schaumburg High School offer a second semester course in psychology as a pilot program to see if the course will be offered at other district schools. Associate Supt. Bruce Altermatt said students are becoming increasingly interested in psychology.

The board also approved a cooperative program with Harper College in food service. Dist. 211 students will be bused to Harper three days a week for the semester-long course designed for juniors and seniors interested in careers in food service.

In addition, the board approved a full year course in early childhood education for students interested in working with children 3 to 5 years old. Students will work at the early childhood education center in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 and may also work with a similar program in Palatine Township Dist. 15.

THE DIST. 211 board approved a calendar for the 1974-75 school year which calls for school to open Thursday, Aug. 29 and to end Friday, June 13.

The calendar contains 185 days and agrees with the calendars which have been adopted by other area school districts.

A Tappan air conditioning dealer takes an unusual interest in your family tree.

If your house is shaded by a big tree, it'll figure into the estimate we work up for you. Depending on where the tree is located in your yard as well as where it shades your house and when, it could mean you'll need less BTU's of cooling. And that'll cost you less.

Taking your family tree into consideration is just part of our estimate. Don't be surprised if we go through your attic, into your cellar, through the ductwork of your furnace, around all of your windows, and into asking personal questions. Like how often you bake cookies or entertain? And how many children you have to open and close doors?

Every Tappan estimate is different for different houses and variables. But, in one respect, they're the same — accurate! And that's because we're a Tappan dealer with a factory-approved checklist to work with.

If the installation is going to be right, the estimate has to be right. A wrong installation can run up your electric bill, and make you uncomfortable in more ways than one.

The other way of estimating go on. Over the phone. Under the table. Overestimated. Underestimated. Some people even get estimates from friends who aren't even in the air conditioning business.

Who can you trust?

After reading this, you shouldn't have to guess.

Survey indicates seniors favor special housing

by MARCIA KRAMER

A just-completed survey of senior citizens in Mount Prospect indicates that two-thirds of them would move into housing especially for the elderly if it were available.

Asked if they would move to senior-citizen housing, 367 respondents, or 68 per cent, answered affirmatively, and 189, or 34 per cent, answered negatively.

Kathleen Stoga, program coordinator of the village's senior citizen service office, which conducted the survey, said the results substantiate her belief that "there's no question" housing for the elderly is needed.

"Just the number that responded that they would move could fill a building," she said.

Mount Prospect currently has no housing development geared toward senior citizens. Mrs. Stoga said the survey, released Friday, will serve as a resource for planning any housing, though she noted that the tight availability of federal funds for building housing for the elderly is "a big problem." "I don't know where we'll go from this point."

THE SURVEY was sent to all village residents with the village calendar, but only residents over 60 years of age were asked to complete it. A total of 583 were returned, of which 556 were used. The number represents 18.5 per cent of the 3,011 residents over 60 years of age, an unusually high return for a survey.

Here at a glance are some of the findings:

- 52 per cent of those who indicated a desire to live in housing for the elderly have incomes under $5,000. By comparison, 48 per cent of those with incomes greater than $10,000 were not interested in senior housing.

- 71 per cent of those interested in senior housing prefer a building where other residents are elderly, versus 29 per cent preferring a building with mixed population.

- Apartments were favored by 50 per cent of those interested in senior housing, versus 31 per cent for a retirement village, 10 per cent for a condominium and 9 per cent for a townhouse.

- In location for senior housing, the following areas were judged "very important" or "important" to live near, in decreasing order: Medical center, churches, downtown, senior center, post office.

- Only 29 per cent indicated they could pay more than $150 a month in rent. The remaining 71 per cent opted for less.

- 41 per cent of those interested in senior housing drive their own cars, versus 55 per cent of those not interested in senior housing. The remaining 59 per cent of the elderly interested in senior citizen housing are dependent on others for a ride (15 per cent), taxicabs (16 per cent) or walk (28 per cent).

State official to view proposed Maryville site

A representative from the Illinois Capital Development Board will visit School Dist. 26 Wednesday to take a firsthand look at the proposed site for the new Maryville School on the Maryville Academy grounds.

Fred Knoke, ICDB official in charge of the Maryville project, will review the site along with Supt. John Fridlund. Fridlund said Knoke's visit is "very encouraging" because it may signify a willingness on the part of the ICDB to approve the site for building the new school.

"I look at this as a very good and hopeful sign that we will be given the go-ahead for the site," Fridlund said Friday.

In January the ICDB ruled the five-acre site at Gregory Street and River Road in Des Plaines unacceptable for building because it was composed of excessive landfill.

NEW SOIL TESTS taken at a different section of the site last month, however, revealed the land in the southeast section of the parcel was composed of less fill. The company which made the second tests, Testing Services Corp. of Wheaton, said the amount of fill in this area would not pose problems for building.

Results of the second soil tests were forwarded to the ICDB, and Knoke has since said that based on these new findings, it is "quite possible" the ICDB would reverse its earlier ruling and approve the site.

Since the second tests were taken at the site, the Chicago Archdiocese, which owns the Maryville property, has agreed to shift the entire five-acre parcel 150 feet to the east, placing it in the area with the least amount of cinderfill.

The old Maryville School, which houses wards of the state, must be replaced because it does not meet state life-safety codes.

When a site location is approved, construction of the school is expected to take about a year to complete.

Citizens' unit plans survey

What do you think of: Local mail delivery? Road conditions? Park facilities? Those and dozens of other questions will be asked of 1,500 Mount Prospect residents in an effort to determine their attitude toward their community.

The survey, which will be conducted through personal interviews, is being arranged by the village's Community Action Plan (CAP).

CAP has no immediate plans for making use of the results, according to CAP Pres. Richard A. Bachhuber, but will make the figures available to other local organizations.

"We're just trying to get some feeling of how residents of Mount Prospect feel about Mount Prospect and all its various types of services."

Municipal services, as well as parks, schools and shopping will be included in the interviews, tentatively scheduled to begin in early May.

TEACHERS AT MAINE EAST High School in Park Ridge turned out yesterday to hear U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., talk about the gas shortage. Stevenson, right center, is flanked on left by Nels Mikva, candidate for the 10th District congressional seat. Stevenson charged the oil firms are gouging the consumer.

by KAREN BLECHA

About 400 Chicago-area teachers greeted Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., with a standing ovation yesterday as he told them "the American people are being ripped off while the government stands by" in the fuel crisis.

"The oil companies have helped create the gas shortage," Stevenson said. "The profits rise higher and the lines grow longer. The people line up at the gas stations, they line up at the bank."

Signs carrying messages of "Dial Down Profits!" "America, the land of plenty — plenty of bull!" and "Kids need heat!" waved throughout the audience of mostly teachers at Maine East High School in Park Ridge.

Stevenson was invited to this "More Gas for Less" rally to talk about his Consumer Energy Act that calls for price rollbacks on gasoline and public reforms of the oil industry.

THE RALLY was sponsored by the Illinois Education Assn., the United Auto Workers and the Amalgamated Meatcutters. The three labor groups had invited congressmen from throughout the state, but only U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10, was there. Abner Mikva, candidate for the 10th District congressional seat, also attended to answer questions. Teachers continued to interrupt

Teachers hear Stevenson lay into oil profits, administration for 'indifference to public'

Stevenson with applause as he rapped the Nixon administration — "At times I am tempted to call the Nixon administration the Exxon administration" — for its unwillingness to fight for the consumer. He even predicted even higher gas prices for the rest of this year, saying they would probably rise 12 to 15 cents per gallon this year as they did in 1973.

"The President's program comes down to higher prices for the consumer," he said. "A policy of consumer gouging is a prescription for economic disaster. What's good for Exxon isn't always good for the country."

Stevenson urged the audience to make their support for his bill which Nixon has threatened to veto, known in Washington. He said he would personally deliver to the White House petitions with 10,000 signatures in support of oil industry reforms that had been gathered by the IEA.

STEVENSON SAID what the teachers wanted to hear: Young did not. In a question-and-answer period after the speech, Young said he would not support Stevenson's bill because it would be "counter-productive to the American free enterprise system," he said. His answer was met with boos and hisses from the audience, as were other of his answers to questions about the fuel shortage. Several times he was interrupted and the audience would not let him finish his answer.

"It's obvious you're not going to take time to listen to me," Young said. "You should get your facts straight (about the gas shortage) before making accusations."

Mikva said he would support Stevenson's bill if he is elected next November. "I am willing to slug it out with the oil industry," he said.

Teachers at the rally complained of cold classrooms and the higher cost of living because of the fuel shortage. Several said they did not know how to answer their students' questions about the gas crisis and who was to blame.

The rally was another attempt by the IEA to build nationwide support for price rollback legislation. Last month, the group demonstrated in front of the Standard Oil of Indiana building in Chicago to protest long lines at gas stations and high prices.

The budget goes 'crunch'

At the moment, projected expenses in village exceed available revenues by more than $1 million: Eppley

by MARCIA KRAMER

"A crunch year." That's how Mount Prospect Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley describes this year's episode in the annual budgeting ritual of trying to match revenues with expenditures.

Even more so than usual this year, projected expenditures far exceed available revenues, and Eppley, pencil in hand, is trying to cross off enough expenditures so the two columns match.

He said he could not yet tell just how big the village's 1974-75 budget will be, but indicated more than a million dollars separate the two totals. "We're still trying to balance it," he said.

THE PROBLEM, as Eppley put it, is that 1974 is "a crunch year. We're trying to help everybody by holding taxes where they are, while at the same time everything we buy — from gas to goods and services — has gone up considerably in cost."

Gas alone has doubled in cost, from 11 to 22 cents a gallon. Water mains cost more now, too, as do the tons of salt spread on local streets in the winter.

"It's like a family," Eppley said. "You sit down with a fixed income but you're faced with rising expenditures. You've got to try to fit it all in. You defer some things, but other things can't be deferred. They've just got to be."

AMONG THE ITEMS expected to be included in the new budget:

- Improvement of the S-curve on S. Elmhurst Rd. Estimated cost: $250,000. (Federal funds may be used for this if they can be obtained.)

- Installation of street lights in the New Town section. Estimated cost: $8,700.

- A study of the feasibility of buying out Citizens Utilities Co. facilities and equipment in the village. Estimated cost: $10,000 to $15,000.

- Land purchases, including possibly the Central School site and the present Mount Prospect State Bank building. Estimated cost: ?

- A study of cable television needs in the village. Estimated cost: $10,000 (refundable when a franchise is issued).

The present budget is $7.7 million, a 24 per cent increase over the 1972-73 budget.

Eppley will submit a draft of the new budget to the village board later this month. The board will review the budget and make any changes at meetings scheduled March 26 and April 3. First reading of the completed document is scheduled for April 9 and final approval on April 16.

The new fiscal year begins May 1.

Local medic returns from Africa

Densil Brown, 201 N. Schoenbeck Rd., Prospect Heights, went to West Africa for three weeks in January and reports that it was an "exhilarating experience."

Accompanying Brown on the trip were his wife Peggy, daughter Cindy, sons David, 10, and Matt, 4, and Brown's co-worker Jean Serio. Daughter Debbie, a freshman Moody Bible Institute student, was on a school choir tour in Europe and was not able to go on this trip.

The Brown group joined 160 others, all members of the Christian Medical Society, to go on the excursion.

"The Society," said Brown, "is composed of fundamental Bible-believing people of all denominations who are doctors, nurses, interns and lab directors." Densil Brown is the Director of Medical Analytics at 530 W. Northwest Hwy., Mount Prospect.

The group went to existing medical establishments and acted as medical advisors. Though there is a good amount of sophisticated medical equipment there, members of the Christian Medical Society were able to explain, help and assist so that maximum use could be derived from the equipment.

Particularly exciting for Brown was visiting a medical laboratory at Monrovia, Liberia. Brown had designed the lab nine years ago and was able to see it for the first time, built and in operation.

ANOTHER EXCITING part of the trip was going out "in the bush" for church services. Brown said, "We were able to meet and get to know some of the native people who were so very lovely. They eagerly welcomed us into their mud huts." Liberia is an English-speaking country and language was not a problem.

The Browns are members of the Prospect Heights Baptist Church which partially supports a missionary in West Africa. They were able to visit the mission there.

"I had a little problem leaving," said Brown. "The government had given us such a warm welcome and was very anxious to have us stay. In particular, people with a medical lab background such as mine are needed there."

"We do hope to go back again. There was such a warm and close feeling between the West African people and our group," he said.

The Browns took a large number of pictures. Church groups and organizations who would be interested in hearing more about the trip should contact Brown.

Poor survey response puts off park plans

A survey that Mount Prospect Park District officials had hoped would steer them in the right direction for planning new programs has failed to jell.

Paul Caldwell, assistant director of parks and recreation, indicated the park district will make "no attempt to analyze" the results because of the small return of questionnaires.

Just 178 surveys were completed from almost 15,000 mailed to park district residents, for a total of 1 per cent.

"I'm afraid we can't draw any conclusions from it," Caldwell said. "There was no clear cut response and there weren't enough to get any kind of a trend."

The questionnaire, sent to residents last December, inquired about present park district facilities and programs and sought suggestions from residents on what types of programs to institute.

Youths to receive court supervision

Two teenagers were placed on a year's court supervision last week after a hearing on drug and liquor charges in the Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Kevin Hickey, 19, of 1437 Mandel Ln., Mount Prospect, appeared on charges of speeding, having open liquor in a vehicle and disorderly conduct. His passenger in the Jan. 29 incident, Susan H. Parkin, 19, of 1151 N. Beverly, Arlington Heights, appeared on a charge of possession of marijuana.

Librarian named to PR committee

Mary Jo Hutchings, head librarian at the Mount Prospect Public Library, has been appointed a member of the Illinois Library Assn.'s public relations and publicity committee.

The committee's tradition assignment is to make preparations for National Library Week, April 21-27. However, Mrs. Hutchings said that this year the committee will expand its operations by acting as a committee to work for "good legislation" on the state level.

The committee will work for changes in three specific areas — school libraries, system libraries and books for the physically handicapped.

Mrs. Hutchings recently has run into a series of brick walls in her efforts to obtain federally funded talking books for a Mount Prospect teenage girl. The girl does not qualify for the books under the current laws because she is not blind or unable to manipulate a regular book.

Caucus elects new chairman

Newt Hallman, 309 N. Dale Ave., Mount Prospect, has been elected chairman of the Dist. 57 Caucus for the 1974-75 year.

Hallman, who had served as chairman of the caucus nominating committee this year, was elected at a meeting Thursday in which candidates for the upcoming school board election were endorsed.

Also elected as caucus officers were George Montalbano, vice chairman, and Vera Miller, secretary-treasurer. The officers will assume their posts at the next regular caucus meeting on April 25.

At the meeting three persons were endorsed for the April 13 election including incumbent Robert Novy, incumbent Edith Freund and Arthur Vogelgesang. Two three-year terms will be filled in the election.

NIPC vice president to speak for RTA

Jack Pahl, vice president of the Northeast Illinois Planning Commission, will address the Mount Prospect Rotary today at noon at Scandia Restaurant, Central and Rand roads, Mount Prospect.

Pahl will speak in support of the proposed Regional Transportation Authority referendum March 19.

Search for driver test site still goes on

by JULIA BAUER

Four years ago, Northwest suburban drivers thought they were about to get their own driver testing station and would no longer have to go 15 to 30 miles to state testing facilities.

Today, the Northwest suburban driver testing station is little closer to reality than it was in 1970.

The biggest single stumbling block to building the station has been a three-year search for a 40-acre site that suits state officials in both cost and location.

THE LATEST SITE to catch the state's eye is land in Barrington Hills, near Ill. Rts. 59 and 72. Earlier sites considered and abandoned over the years were in Arlington Heights and unincorporated Palatine Township.

But now, the search for other locations is on again, at least on a small scale, according to Illinois Secretary of State spokesman, Norbert Johnson.

"The fact of the matter is we're looking for other sites with less impediments," Johnson said. He's been heading the investigation of the Barrington Hills site for nearly a year, and said yesterday that the search for an alternative location has not been successful.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, when contacted by The Herald Friday, said he would call Howlett today to check on the state's progress or possible lack of it. Schlickman was instrumental in getting legislation to fund the station two years ago.

PROBLEMS WITH THE Barrington Hills location were predicted last year by members of a three-man search committee appointed under former Secretary of State John Lewis, a Republican.

Search committee members submitted a list of recommended locations to newly-elected Democratic Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett in January, 1973, but the Barrington Hills location was not one of the sites on their list.

Why? Committee members said the site was not served by sewer or water lines from the Metropolitan Sanitary District and it did not meet the committee's accessibility requirement for the bulk of the traffic which would come from the southeast. In fact, the one big thing the site did have in its favor was a low purchase price, reported at $12,000 per acre.

The committee's top recommendations cost an average of $30,000 per acre, although those sites were already improved. Last summer, Johnson predicted that the state could extend improvements to the Barrington Hills location and still spend less than it would cost for the higher-priced sites.

STATE LEGISLATORS set aside $5.3 million two years ago to buy land and build the station, when it appeared that the testing station would go on a 40-acre site west of Palatine, on Quentin Road between Northwest Highway and Dundee Road.

Poor soil conditions and pressure from local currency exchanges caused the site to be dropped, according to state officials. That location is currently scheduled for a condominium apartment project.

The final purchase and construction of the Northwest suburban site is apparently not imminent. Johnson said he had no specific target date for finalizing the purchase.

In the meantime, Northwest suburban residents must still go to Libertyville or Elgin for their driving tests.

When it is built, the Northwest suburban station will have facilities for written and on-the-road testing of drivers.

IT WON'T BE LONG NOW. Houses lying in the path of the new Mount Prospect State Bank building are being uprooted and moved. This house, is viewed through the window of the present bank building, 15 E. Busse Ave.

Doctors hit federal controls on health-care industry

by STEVE BROWN

They complained about the lid on rate increases. They badgered a federal official as to why they are one of the few segments of the economy still under price controls.

The scene was reminiscent of last month's demands raised by independent truckers, but instead of the scenario taking place at a truck stop, the grouseers were gathered in the ballroom at the North Shore Hilton in Skokie.

About 60 doctors and hospital officials were there to listen to and question John Twinn, one of the government's chief architects for the price control on the health care industry.

TWNAME, WHOSE breakfast meeting with the doctors was organized by U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10th, took a tough stand against the demands of medical men who clamored for a complete removal of controls on how much they could raise their rates.

The administrator of the health section of the U.S. Cost of Living Council, charged the health care industry was one of the most inflationary components of the economy before wage and price controls were instituted in 1971. He noted health care represents a $100 billion industry annually.

"Doctors fees were rising at least 50 per cent faster than the rest of the economy then," he said. He explained that the controls which now limit fee hikes to amount to 4 per cent annually appeared to be one of the few segments of the price stabilization issue which appeared to be working.

"I believe the medical profession should be commended for their efforts to help bring down the cost of living," Twinn said.

HOWEVER, THE kudos from Twinn were short lived as the doctors asked why the government had kept controls on them, while dropping controls on other segments of the economy.

They argued that the government should allow the controls to float free.

It was noted that not only have costs risen more than 4 per cent annually, but the actual treatment performed by doctors has become more comprehensive and more sophisticated in recent years.

Hospital officials also noted they were in a bind because they were unable to pass along increased cost from suppliers because of the price controls.

"We have to get the government out of the business of financing medical care," said Dr. George Lagorio. He noted that much of the inflationary problems were created as a direct result of the Medicare program.

"It used to be that we could not get a person over 65 into a hospital, now we cannot get them out," he added.

HOWEVER, TWNAME indicated a fear of what would happen to doctors fees and hospital rates if controls were removed.

"The restraints we have seen would turn into a gold rush," he said, adding that the fees and rates would jump dramatically as doctors attempted to boost rates to the highest possible level anticipating tighter controls imposed by a national health insurance plan.

Twinn said he believed some type of flexible controls are needed for the period between the time price controls are ended, which could be as soon as the end of April, and the start of a national health insurance plan.

"The public has a Jeckell and Hyde view of the medical field, they want the best health care at all costs, until they get the bill, then they call for the clamps," he said.

BOTH TWNAME and Young warned the medicine men they are vulnerable targets to some public officials.

"Many people believe that doctors and lawyers are overpaid," Young said. A spokesman for the American Medical Assn. said that "doctors are usually at the top of the income scale for all professional fields." He added that doctors earn an average of about $40,000 annually.

Despite the high incomes, doctors and hospital officials said continued controls could lead to strikes and the unionization of hospital employees.

RALPH HUTCHINS, administrator of the Skokie Valley Hospital, noted, "how can we be controlled and our suppliers not be controlled?" He also said that some hospitals have put off the purchase of new equipment because of the inability to pass along the costs because of controls.

"It could very well be possible that what you are seeing from the independent truckers this year could be repeated by doctors in three or four years," one doctor warned.

The search goes on

Four years later, hunt for a suburban driver testing site continues; Barrington Hills location, despite complications, still top choice

by JULIA BAUER

Four years ago, Northwest suburban drivers thought they were about to get their own driver testing station and would no longer have to go 15 to 30 miles to state testing facilities.

Today, the Northwest suburban driver testing station is little closer to reality than it was in 1970.

The biggest single stumbling block to building the station has been a three-year search for a 40-acre site that suits state officials in both cost and location.

THE LATEST SITE to catch the state's eye is land in Barrington Hills, near Ill. Rts. 59 and 72. Earlier sites considered and abandoned over the years were in Arlington Heights and unincorporated Palatine Township.

But now, the search for other locations is on again, at least on a small scale, according to Illinois Secretary of State spokesman, Norbert Johnson.

"The fact of the matter is we're looking for other sites with less impediments," Johnson said. He's been heading the investigation of the Barrington Hills site for nearly a year, and said yesterday that the search for an alternative location has not been successful.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, when contacted by The Herald Friday, said he would call Howlett today to check on the state's progress or possible lack of it. Schlickman was instrumental in getting legislation to fund the station two years ago.

PROBLEMS WITH THE Barrington Hills location were predicted last year by members of a three-man search committee appointed under former Secretary of State John Lewis, a Republican.

Search committee members submitted a list of recommended locations to newly-elected Democratic Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett in January, 1973, but the Barrington Hills location was not one of the sites on their list.

Why? Committee members said the site was not served by sewer or water lines from the Metropolitan Sanitary District and it did not meet the committee's accessibility requirement for the bulk of the traffic which would come from the southeast. In fact, the one big thing the site did have in its favor was a low purchase price, reported at $12,000 per acre.

The committee's top recommendations cost an average of $30,000 per acre, although those sites were already improved. Last summer, Johnson predicted that the state could extend improvements to the Barrington Hills location and still spend less than it would cost for the higher-priced sites.

The final purchase and construction of the Northwest suburban site is apparently not imminent. Johnson said he had no specific target date for finalizing the purchase.

Hopes others will run

Independent seeks school board post 'to break ice'

An Arlington Heights resident said he will run in Dist. 25 school board election as an independent in order to "break the ice" for all other potential candidates.

Richard Hammerli, 931 N. Chestnut, will compete with incumbents Joan Klusman, 3 E. Canterbury, and Robert Kazlauskis, 639 N. Kaspar, both of Arlington Heights, for two seats on the board in the April 13 election.

"I hope my candidacy will encourage other well qualified persons to do likewise," he said. Hammerli, 45, said he will file a nominating petition on Monday.

Dissatisfied by the operations of the Dist. 25 nominating committee, also known as the caucus, Hammerli said that it precludes the election and prevents other seemingly well-qualified persons from running if they are not endorsed.

Hammerli said he was a candidate for the 1971 election but chose not to run when he did not win caucus endorsement. "If you got endorsement it was a shoo-in guarantee to the board," Hammerli said. "Of course you can run as an independent, but why bother?"

A MEMBER OF the Arlington Heights Youth Council, Hammerli is involved with other activities helping young people in the area. He helped start the Turning Point Hot Line of the Arlington Heights Crisis Intervention Center Inc.

Currently he is working on a project to bring 200 teenagers together to raise money for a youth community center in Chicago. Hammerli plans to conduct a 50-mile bike hike for those teenagers helping in the drive.

"My main qualification to be a school board member is that I have a deep concern for young people," said Hammerli, the father of five children.

"I'm not convinced that our schools are as great as they should be. I want the real issue of schools to be brought forth."

HAMMERLI SAID that the impetus for him to become an independent candidate occurred when James Foster and H. Robert Powell declined to run as independent candidates after they failed to get caucus endorsement last month.

"A lot of people still feel that the caucus is producing good candidates and they do, but a lot of good people never come forth," he said.

"I would like to debate the issue before the caucus on who they want on the school board," said Hammerli. "I don't have all the answers to the questions but I am willing to debate on the issue."

Hammerli is an analytical chemist at the United States Gypsum Co., Des Plaines, and has lived in the district for 13 years.

He will go to the Arlington Teachers Assn. to be screened for candidacy.

Parks to cut nonresident tennis fees

Rates for memberships in the Arlington Heights Park District Forest View Tennis Club will be equalized next season for residents and nonresidents.

The park board voted the change last week on recommendations by Ron Dodd, park recreation superintendent.

The fee structure will be $60 for a family membership, $30 for an adult membership, $15 for a youth membership and $100 for a company membership. The fees remain the same for residents, but are cut by half from last year's rates for nonresidents of the park district.

The new lower rates for nonresidents were recommended because the club is being financed through revenue bonds, and not money generated by tax revenues. All revenues from the club are to go toward the self-sufficient operation of it.

Dodd said the low rates were necessary to attract members in the area, which already has eight other tennis clubs. He said rates of other clubs were substantially higher than the park's facility.

The club had been operating at 90 to 95 per cent court capacity since its opening in fall, but jumped to 80 per cent during February, Dodd said.

Suddenly it's spring

Police departments in Arlington Heights, Palatine and Rolling Meadows all reported a number of runaway dogs and minibike complaints over the weekend — a measure almost as valid as the thermometer in recording the unseasonably warm weather.

TEACHERS AT MAINE EAST High School in Park Ridge turned out yesterday to hear U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., talk about the gas shortage. Stevenson, right center, is flanked on left by Nels Swiedarko, president of the Illinois Education Assn., which sponsored the rally, and Abner Mikva, candidate for the 10th District congressional seat. Stevenson charged the oil firms are gouging the consumer.

by KAREN BLECHA

About 400 Chicago-area teachers greeted Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., with a standing ovation yesterday as he told them "the American people are being ripped off while the government stands by" in the fuel crisis.

"The oil companies have helped create the gas shortage," Stevenson said. "The profits rise higher and the lines grow longer. The people line up at the gas stations, they line up at the bank."

Signs carrying messages of "Dial Down Profits!" "America, the land of plenty — plenty of bull!" and "Kids need heat!" waved throughout the audience of mostly teachers at Maine East High School in Park Ridge.

Stevenson was invited to this "More Gas for Less" rally to talk about his Consumer Energy Act that calls for price rollbacks on gasoline and public reforms of the oil industry.

THE RALLY was sponsored by the Illinois Education Assn., the United Auto Workers and the Amalgamated Meatcutters. The three labor groups had invited congressmen from throughout the state, but only U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10, was there. Abner Mikva, candidate for the 10th District congressional seat, also attended to answer questions.

Teachers continued to interrupt

Adlai: oil companies 'ripping off consumers'

Teachers hear Stevenson lay into oil profits, administration for 'indifference to public'

Stevenson with applause as he rapped the Nixon administration — "At times I am tempted to call the Nixon administration the Exxon administration" — for its unwillingness to fight for the consumer. He even predicted even higher gas prices for the rest of this year, saying they would probably rise 12 to 15 cents per gallon this year as they did in 1973.

"The President's program comes down to higher prices for the consumer," he said. "A policy of consumer gouging is a prescription for economic disaster. What's good for Exxon isn't always good for the country."

Stevenson urged the audience to make their support for his bill which Nixon has threatened to veto, known in Washington. He said he would personally deliver to the White House petitions with 10,000 signatures in support of oil industry reforms that had been gathered by the IEA.

STEVENSON SAID what the teachers wanted to hear: Young did not. In a question-and-answer period after the speech, Young said he would not support Stevenson's bill because it would be "counter-productive to the American free enterprise system," he said. His answer was met with boos and hisses from the audience, as were other of his answers to questions about the fuel shortage. Several times he was interrupted and the audience would not let him finish his answer.

"It's obvious you're not going to take time to listen to me," Young said. "You should get your facts straight (about the gas shortage) before making accusations."

Mikva said he would support Stevenson's bill if he is elected next November. "I am willing to slug it out with the oil industry," he said.

Teachers at the rally complained of cold classrooms and the higher cost of living because of the fuel shortage. Several said they did not know how to answer their students' questions about the gas crisis and who was to blame.

The rally was another attempt by the IEA to build nationwide support for price rollback legislation. Last month, the group demonstrated in front of the Standard Oil of Indiana building in Chicago to protest long lines at gas stations and high prices.

North Point bank job suspect a real 'glamor boy'

by JOE SWICKARD

The romance has not entirely left bank robbery. And neither has the daring escape artist with the fancy monicker.

Earl Duane Peterson, who federal officials believe was involved in the April 1973 robbery of the North Point State Bank has been tagged as the "Glamor Boy Bandit" of Los Angeles.

The Glamor Boy's criminal career has been marked by his one-man bank jobs and highlighted by his frequent escapes from custody, according to the FBI.

Peterson's latest fling of freedom was a swath of bank robberies across the country after escaping from the Los Angeles police department. Since his apprehension, he has made three more attempts at flight.

March, 1973 found the Glamor Boy serving a 10-year sentence for five bank robberies in the Los Angeles area.

On March 19, he was being transported by the Los Angeles police department to court for more legal action when he disappeared. He reportedly picked his hand cuffs and hid in a trash cart and made a successful break.

IT WAS NOT THE first time he picked locks. In 1972 Los Angeles police had him for awhile but he picked a lock and was gone. A woman in Palm Springs, Calif., recognized him from newspaper photographs and he was again arrested — but not for long.

As detectives from Los Angeles were driving to Palm Springs, Peterson picked the lock of his cell plus three other locks in the Palm Springs jail and escaped. He was arrested the next day.

These escapes and the invariable description of him as "big, blond and handsome," earned him the name of the Glamor Boy Bandit. A Scandinavian accent from his hometown of Hibbing, Minn., contributed to his reputation.

After his escape in March, 1973, the 33-year-old bandit reverted to his old habit of robbing banks, police said.

Tuesday, April 19, 1973, was opening day at Arlington Park race track. It was also the day a tall blond with an accent came to town.

A MAN WEARING a green jacket approached a woman teller in the North Point State Bank and asked her to change a $100 bill. When she turned around he had an attaché case on the counter and a gun in his hand.

With more than $18,000 in the bag, including the $100 ruse, the gunman ordered the teller to lie on the floor. He walked out of the bank and drove away.

Peterson surfaced in a bank in Daytona Beach, Fla., on June 14. Again acting alone, he struck and was gone.

He next was seen in Colorado on Nov. 8, when he was arrested by Denver police for driving with impaired ability. The charge was a misdemeanor and he was soon released. But his fingerprints were on they way to FBI headquarters in Washington, D.C.

The FBI now had his new alias and the license number on his Colorado car. An all-points bulletin was issued for him.

HE WAS ARRESTED two weeks later in Gallup, N.M., for the Florida bank robbery. On his return, he lived up to his reputation by attempting to escape three times. Once he overpowered his guards but was quickly recaptured.

Peterson pleaded guilty to the Florida bank robbery on Feb. 22, 1974. He is still in custody of the U.S. marshals there.

Peterson has yet to be formally charged with the local robbery. It is expected he will be indicted some time this week by the U.S. attorney's office in Chicago.

Dist. 25 wrapup

Career awareness plan to continue

School Dist. 25 board members voted last week to continue participation in a state financed project designed to promote career awareness in students.

Called Project Elementary Vocational Education, the program has been providing career information, orientation and guidance to students in elementary and junior high schools for the past three years.

Workshops, conferences, exhibits and materials are available throughout the school year for teachers. James Montgomery, director of instruction, estimated that in the past 50 teachers in Dist. 25 participated in the project which costs the state about $15,000 a year.

The program also serves Districts 21, 23, 57 as well as 25. All districts are in the Northwest Educational Cooperative.

Youth unit to maintain schools?

School officials are planning a meeting with the Arlington Park District to discuss the possibility of hiring the Ecology Corps to maintain the school grounds during the summer.

James Monroe, director of building grounds and auxiliary services and Robert Kazlausk, school board member will attend the meeting which will be scheduled at a later date.

Both parties will discuss possible projects that both park and school districts may participate together.

The Ecology Corps is a maintenance group that cares for village and park property during the summer. Made up of children from ages 13 through 15, the program is funded by the village and sponsored by the park district.

Superintendent on television

Donald V. Strong, superintendent of School Dist. 25, last week participated in a televised panel show during the annual conference of the American Assn. of School Administrators in Atlantic City, N.J. Approximately 17,000 persons attended.

Strong, with several other school officials throughout the country, talked about avoiding pitfalls in school district administration.

Parks offer children's ballet, women's exercise, tennis

The Arlington Heights Park District will offer lessons in children's ballet, women's exercise and tennis.

The fee for eight one-hour lessons is $5. Beginner's classes are open to children in kindergarten. Ballet positions, basic movements and exercises will be taught. Intermediate classes are open to those in grade school who have completed the beginner's course.

Mrs. Kurp also will be teaching women's slim and trim exercises at Recreation Park on Thursday nights at 7:30 p.m. starting March 14.

The classes, open to women of all ages, will concentrate on yoga and Danish exercises, followed by a sauna. The fee is $5 for the eight one-hour lessons.

Registration for ballet and exercises is being taken at Recreation Park. For more information, call the park at 255-8850.

The Forest View Tennis Club is offering daytime lessons starting March 18, and evening lessons starting March 25.

Classes are being offered at beginning, advanced beginning and intermediate levels. Lessons are an hour a week for eight weeks. The fee is $27 for adults and $22.50 for juniors. Private lessons are also available.

The classes will be taught by Dorothy French, the club professional. For more information, call the club at 593-3285.

Troop 159 conducts summer camp signup

Boy Scout Troop 159, sponsored by St. Simon's Episcopal Church in Arlington Heights, recently conducted its annual Camp Napowan summer camp registration program.

The event was for boys who are planning to attend summer camp at Wild Rose, Wis. Parents were invited to attend a film of the Scouts at last summer's camping session.

Also at the meeting, Eagle Scout Dan Knight was presented with the Eagle Gold Palm award. Awards earned by the troop at the Sauk Woods Klondike Derby also were presented.

Drug abuse film today

The Arlington Heights Drug Council will present a film on drug abuse, by Art Linkletter, today at 8 p.m. in the Dunton Room of the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

Representatives of the police department and the council will be on hand for a question and answer session following the film.

Nixon asked to declare Nike base 'surplus'

The Arlington Heights Park District has written President Richard Nixon asking him to "help prepare the way" for declaring the Nike Base surplus land.

The district hopes to build a $1 million golf course on the 137-acre Nike Base. They have retained an architect and approved plans for the course, to be named Lochland Links.

Charles Cronin, park president, has also written letters to area legislators asking their support for converting the missile site into a park.

In his letter to President Nixon, Cronin said use of the site for an Army Reserve camp would be "a gross misuse of valuable property."

Cronin has called for petitions and letters supporting the park district's effort to be sent to legislators, the President and the secretaries of the Army and Defense departments.

Forest View boundaries topic

The High School Dist. 214 board of education will continue discussion of possible boundary changes affecting Forest View High School at a meeting tonight.

District officials said Saturday the meeting will be held at 8 p.m. in the Prospect High School auditorium, not the district administration building as originally scheduled. The auditorium will accommodate a larger crowd than the administration building.

Last week the district heard proposals to relieve overcrowding at Forest View High School next year by transferring students from the Mount Prospect Dist. 57 area south of Weller Creek to Prospect High School or by transferring students living south of Algonquin Road to Elk Grove High School.

The board has said it will make a decision on possible boundaries at its March 11 meeting.

Commuter protests rush-hour 'squeeze play' at station

by KURT BAEER

Hundreds of railroad commuters were caught in an uncomfortable squeeze play recently when two northwest-bound trains pulled into the Arlington Heights station at the same time.

The scheduling mixup caused no death or injury. But it was enough to unnerve at least one passenger, Jim Schrader of Buffalo Grove, who reported the incident to officials at the Chicago and North Western Ry. and asked for an investigation.

Schrader was a passenger on C&NW's No. 639 scheduled to arrive in Arlington Heights at 5:56 p.m. Last Thursday, as he and some 1,000 other commuters were getting off the train a second C&NW train pulled into the station, slowly slicing through the crowd of disembarking passengers and trapping some between the two sets of tracks.

"There was one little girl on the track who was grabbed away by a man who looked like he might have been attacking her, when actually he was probably saving her life," Schrader says.

R. A. DRENGLER, assistant division manager for the railroad and the man who investigated the incident, says the second train, followed to the letter the railroad's procedure in the case.

"The train made a complete stop before it reached the station and then proceeded at less than 5 m.p.h. We found nothing unsafe or irregular about it at all," Drengler said.

The second train, which was sounding its horn and pulled in, may have been late or the first train may have been early. Drengler could not be sure.

BUT ACCORDING to the railroad's timetable the twin arrival should not have occurred. The next train after the 639 is the 641 and it is not scheduled to arrive until 6:13. The train before the 639 is supposed to be in Arlington Heights at 5:49 p.m.

Drengler says it is not an uncommon occurrence among the railroad's 200 daily trains and 60 suburban stations for one train to arrive before another has left.

"Our rules require that the train proceed through the station area with extreme caution, and that is what the engineer did in this instance," he said.

COMMUTERS sometimes have to scurry across the tracks when two Chicago and North Western Ry. trains arrive at almost the same time.

State official to inspect proposed Maryville site

A representative from the Illinois Capital Development Board will visit School Dist. 26 Wednesday to take a firsthand look at the proposed site for the new Maryville School on the Maryville Academy grounds.

Fred Knoke, ICDB official in charge of the Maryville project, will review the site along with Supt. John Fridlund. Fridlund said Knoke's visit is "very encouraging" because it may signify a willingness on the part of the ICDB to approve the site for building the new school.

"I look at this as a very good and hopeful sign that we will be given the go-ahead for the site," Fridlund said Friday.

In January the ICDB ruled the five-acre site at Gregory Street and River Road in Des Plaines unacceptable for building because it was composed of excessive landfill.

NEW SOIL TESTS taken at a different section of the site last month, however, revealed the land in the southeast section of the parcel was composed of less fill. The company which made the second tests, Testing Services Corp. of Wheaton, said the amount of fill in this area would not pose problems for building.

Results of the second soil tests were forwarded to the ICDB, and Knoke has since said that based on these new findings, it is "quite possible" the ICDB would reverse its earlier ruling and approve the site.

Since the second tests were taken at the site, the Chicago Archdiocese, which owns the Maryville property, has agreed to shift the entire five-acre parcel 150 feet to the east, placing it in the area with the least amount of cinderfill.

The old Maryville School, which houses wards of the state, must be replaced because it does not meet state life-safety codes.

When a site location is approved, construction of the school is expected to take about a year to complete.
